MONASTERY FOR MENLO

Redwood To Observe Memorial Day

School Bids Are Received

BIDS ARE OPENED BY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Thirteen Contractors Offer Bids For New School

Bids were received and opened by the board of trustees of the Redwood City grammar school, last Friday evening. Bids had been called for the erection of a new school building on the corner of James and Duane streets. Thirteen bids were received and are now under consideration of the board.

The bids received for the new school were as follows, together with the time required by the contractor for the completion of the work:

Mahoney & Moore—$167,446, 120 days.

E. K. Nelson—$147,375, 250 days.

J. A. Bryant—$155,000, 175 days.

F. J. Riley—$163,883, 240 days

David Graham—$152,940, 180 days.

Jasper Storey Co.—$149,956, 225 days.

H. Larson—$177,470, 245 days.

Fred Moller—$159,311, 190 days.

C. L. Wold—149,800, 170 days.

Larsen & Larsen—$162,522, 55 days.

Voight & Davidson—$164,400 90 days.

L. Diogardi — $147,500, 190 days.

R. C. Stickle—$155,845—6 and 2 months.

In as much as there are several alternate bids and as the time required for the completion of the building forms an imroptant part of the consideration, a thorough study of the bids will be made by the board of trustees before the contract is awarded.

The new building will be of a style similar to that of the high school and will contain twenty rooms. The estimated cost of the building is $150,000.

New Butcher Shop Open In Hinman's

A new meat market has been opened by the Nelson Meat Co. in the Redwood Groceteria, conducted by E. B. Hinman at the corner of Stambaugh and Main streets. The manager of the new market is George W. Fletcher. The establishment of the meat department, Hinman feels, will be appreciated by his customers, who will be able to purchase their meats without leaving the store. Hinman also maintains a vegetable department.

The new line has necessitated a complete rearrangement of the store and the installation of several hundred dollars worth of additional equipment.

EXCHANGE CLUB DELEGATES GIVE REPORTS

Reports on the state convention of Exchange Clubs which was held last week in Sacramento, were given Tuesday evening by President Frank Griffin and Secretary Carroll Hall of the local club. Other delegates who attended the convention were Lindsay Gray, Kendall Towne, Guy Kennedy, Al Davies, Dr. W. H. Murphy and L. M. Pollard. All spoke enthusiastically of the convention and reported having had an enjoyable time in the capital city. Fresno was selected as the state convention city of Exchange for 1928.

Guy R. Kennedy was chairman of the evening.

County Elks to Picnic at Menlo

The annual picnic of the San Mateo Lodge of Elks will be held at Felton Gables in Menlo Park on June 5. The site is the estate of the late Senator Felton, and is one of the beauty spots of the peninsula. The spot was chosen by a committee from the lodge which considered spots in all portions of the peninsula for the annual event which is given by the Elks for the children.

The program is to include a monster barbecue, with coffee, ice cream, soda water and other features. There will be clowns to entertain the youngsters, with races, music, singing and dancing for all who attend. The day has been especially planned as an outing for members of the lodge and their families.

NEW STORE TO OPEN SATURDAY

Preparations are nearing completion for the opening of the dry goods store of W. P. Dixon on Broadway tomorrow. Dickson has been busy all week installing a complete line of gods and novelties. The Dixon Dry Goods Company adjoins the Piggly Wiggly store which opens today.

WHOLESALE GROCERY COMPANY WILL SERVE LARGE TERRITORY

Local Concern to Employ Water Transportation

Plans are being completed for the opening here of the Peninsula Wholesale Grocery Co., which will occupy a portion of the warehouse of the Erickson Navigation Co. at the foot of Main street. The new company will carry a full line of groceries such as the retail trade demands, and will cover a territory from San Bruno to Santa Clara.

It is stated by those who are organizing the company, a number of grocery retailers in this district, that the concern will be able to give the retailer a much quicker turnover of his goods, and make possible the reduction of his stock and overhead. A large part of the produce handled by the new concern will be brought in by water, and will assist in building up the harbor trade from this city.

FUNERAL HELD FOR PIONEER COUNTY TEACHER

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon for one of the pioneer teachers of the county, Miss Mary Leathers, for forty years a teacher in the county schools.

Miss Leathers was a member of one of the best known families of Redwood City in the early days. Her father, Peter Leathers, was a leading hay and grain dealer of the county and built the first large warehouse in Redwood City. The family resided at that time on Webster street, near Marshall.

Miss Leathers was for many years the primary teacher in the school here, and many of the leading men of the city today received their first instruction from her in the little school recenly torn down which stood in the rear of the city hall.

Later Miss Leathers taught school in Pescadero, and the last work in teaching was in the San Bruno school. She retired after teaching for forty years and has since been making her home in Oakland with a neice.

Miss Leathers was a sister of Miss Dot Leathers, another well-known teacher here a number of years ago, who later married and became Mrs. Klockson. A daughter of this sister, Miss Marion Klockson is now a student at Stanford. Mrs. Klockson passed away about ten years ago. A brother, Ben Leathers survives and two other brothers, Joe and Dick Leathers have passed away.

Piggly Wiggly Chain Store Opens Here

The local branch of the Piggly Wiggly chain store organization has completed all its arrangements for epening today. This will be the fifth store in the chain established by this concern in San Mateo county. The others are in San Mateo, South San Francisco and two in Burlingame.

The Redwood City store is credited with being the best store opened on the peninsula. An especially fine set of store equipment has been installed and the manager, Geo. Conzett, is confident that the local store will be one of the best in the district. The Redwood City store is No. 34.

The local store will be one of chain fo 34 stores and 32 meat markets sustained by the Piggly Wiggly Company of San Francisco. The San Francisco unit has increased to this number from 20 stores and 12 meat markets in February 1926, and has become recognized as the unit operating the cleanest and best Piggly Wiggly stores of any unit in the United States.

PUBLISHER OF SAN MATEO IS CLUB SPEAKER

Memorial Day was observed in the regular meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club this week on Wednesday at the Episcopal Parish house. The Kiwanians had as their guests representatives of the G. A. R., United Spanish War Veterans, American Legion, Women's Relief Corps, Spanish War Veterans' Auxilliary and the Auxiliary of the American Legion.

Elmore B. Hinman, first president of the Kiwanis Club, and an active member of Camp Reilly, U. S. W. V., was chairman of the meeting and introduced Horace Amphlet, San Mateo publisher, who was the speaker of the occasion. Amphlet in a very impressive and eloquent manner paid a tribute to the veterans both living and dead who have fought in the great wars in which this nation has engaged.

WELL KNOWN MAN ENDS LIFE

The body of Joseph McNaughton, well-known gardener and mill hand, was found last Friday on the Flood estate in Menlo Park by two boys who were playing on the brick wall which surrounds the estate. McNaughton had committed suicide by hanging himself from one of the trees on the Flood place.

The two boys, William Falstich and Donald Tuxford, notified an older brother of the former, who in turn called the sheriff. William Hansen of the James Crowe Co. went to Menlo and brought the body to Redwood City, where an inquest was held on Saturday.

McNaughton, who had been in this section for many years was 55 years of age. He is thought to have brothers and sisters some where in the east. His suicide is thought to have been caused by his inability to secure employment.

LEGLESS ATHLETE TO EXHIBIT HERE

Zimmy, born without legs, yet a marvel of health and strength, and a great swimmer, will give an exhibition of swimming at the Sequoia Theatre at both the matinee and evening shows on Saturday. He will also give a talk on hygiene and athletics.

Zimmy, who is married and the father of two children, swam the Golden Gate channel in 53 minutes. He was the contender in the swimming race to Santa Catalina. In this race he was inadvertently seized by his tender who thought that he was sinking. This disqualified him after he had made a third of the distance. He is an expert diver and has established a record for staying under water, having been under for four minutes and 17 seconds.

Menlo Park Chosen For Site of Large Monastery

HALF MILLION DOLLAR STRUCTURE WILL BE STARTED IMMEDIATELY ON NURSERY PROPERTY ON OAK AVENUE—WILL BE HOME OF CATHOLIC NUNS

A big real estate deal was consummated yesterday at Menlo Park whereby the Bank of Italy and Mrs. D. E. O'Keefe conveys the twelve and three-quarters acres of land on Oak Grove avenue, known as the Lynch Nurseries to the Dominician Nuns of Corpus Christi Monastery, now occupying a temporary residence at 1090 Eddy street, San Francisco.

This transaction means much to the educational and religious life of that section already famous for its institutions of learning. The property was formerly owned by the late Michael Lynch who many years ago established a vast nursery there, one of the first on the peninsula. Lynch was an expert horticulturist, having learned his trade in the botonical gardens of London. When Timothy Hopkins wanted an expert to establish a nursery at Menlo Park in the nineties he selected Mr. Lynch as the superintendent. Hopkins was the first on the peninsula to sell flowers in the San Francisco market. After Hopkins retired from the floral tindustry Lynch started for himself establishing the Lynch Nurseries that became famous for the quality and perfection of his product. From this nursery the first chrysanthemums were shipped to the San Francisco market. Flowers were sent as far east as Denver. Lynch had a good market for his flowers at Los Angeles Portland, Seattle and other northern points. Some time after his death in 1907, the nurseries were abandoned.

On Monday next new owners will begin to clear the property preparatory for the construction of a monastery consisting of a group of buildings, magnificent in appearance and picturesque from an architectural point of view. When completed they will cost in the neighborhood of a half million dollars. The surrounding grounds are to be in keeping with the buildings that are to constructed in the center of the tract nicely dotted with majestic oaks. Lawns will be laid out and rare shrubbery and flowers planted. The monastery will become one of the show places of the peninsula.

The tract is surrounded by the estates of James D. O'Kane, J. A. Donohoe, Timothy Hopkins, Julius McClymont. Here in this beautiful setting will come devout and holy women to contemplate and pray to the Master of all for all mankind. These beautiful and attractive buildings set in a carpet of green, surrounded by rare flowers and with their heads towering heavenward will attract the tourist, the religious and the esthetic.

This big institution coming to this section is another large boost for the climatic conditions and advantages of the peninsula.

The sale was negotiated by the real estate firm of Wilson and Filmer, 341 Kearney street, San Francisco, J. Warnock Walsh, formerly of Redwood City, arranging the details.

The new monastery will be an exact reproduction of the one owned by the nuns in New York. Plans are out for the new buildings and work on them will proceed at once.

This branch of the Dominican Order comes down in direct lineage from the great Monastery of Prouille, founded by St. Dominic himself in France in 1205. Many other foundations were later made in France, and from the Monastery of Oullins (Lyons), there came to the United States, in 1880, a little band of four nuns, to found the first house of the order in this country. In this group were two American nuns who had joined the community in France, with the intention of later introducing Dominican contemplative life and Perpetual Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament in the United States.

The Monastery of Oullins had been a tribute of faith and gratitude to God from a pious lady, the Countess of Villeneuve, and to this foundation had been granted not only the privilege of Perpetual Adoration within its walls, but the privilege was open also to every future Monastery taking its rise therefrom, being dependent however, on the approbation of the Ordinary. Thus in all the Monasteries of the United States, Perpetual Adoration is maintained. The first Monastery was at Newark, and the following are the foundations which have since been made: Hunt's Point, New York, 1889; Detroit 1906; Cincinnati, 1915; Albany, 1915; San Francisco, 1921; Los Angeles, 1924.

The chapel of Perpetual Adoration is subdivided, for the religious and laity, by a wall broken by the open niche for the Throne of the Blessed Sacrament, to which ascends on either side a long semi-circular flight of steps. To this archway, in front of the grille, stands the Altar, where the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass is celebrated. The elevated niche where the Blessed Sacrament is perpetually exposed, in a monstrance of most exquisite design and workmanship, is finished in white marble, a door of heavy plate glass on either side. The Sacred Host is perfectly visible to adorers in both divisions of the chapel; but in the interior by day and by night, there are watchers, two at least, before the Eucharistic Presence. In the outer chapel, memorial lamps hang suspended at either side, the graded ascent of crimson light producing a beautiful effect in the dim chapel. They are supplied with oil at the expense of those who wish to have them burned for their private intentions or in memory of the dead. They are attended by the outside sisters. The waxen tapers, close to the Blessed Sacrament, burn during the day on the outer side, during the night in the cloistered chapel.

When a monastery is founded it becomes independent of that from which it springs, passing directly under the jurisdiction of the bishop in whose diocese the new foundation is made. To effect a foundation, the sanction is necessary of one bishop for the going forth of a colony of religious and of the other for their entrance into the new field. The monastery at Newark, and all the others, have been upreared by the offerings of the faithful in general; especially have the poor been generous-hearted. These monasteries have no fixed revenue whatever, and often during their first years have heavy debts to meet. But to those who are called to seek thus absolutely the Kingdom of God, all things else are given unto them. Daily trust meets its reward in help for daily needs. And those who give to them of their abundance or their poverty are surely richly rewarded by a share in the merits of that life of ceaseless mortification and ever-recurring prayer to which these nuns have consecrated their lives. In the monastery about to be erected at Menlo, a list of donors written on parchment, will be sealed under the marble slab on which will rest the monstrance of exposition.

HURLBUT ESTATE CONTEST FILED IN SUPERIOR COURT

The petition for probate of will of the late Mary C. Hurlbut came up in the Superior court for hearing yesterday and was continued for two weeks. A contest has been filed by Edward H. Hurlbut, the well-known writer and newspaper man of San Francisco and a step-son of the decedent.

Some time before her death and while she was in a San Francisco hospital recovering from a major operation, Mrs. Hurlbut executed a will leaving all her property to her daughter, Mrs. Muriel McVeigh. The property is valued in excess of $20,000.

The contest is brought on the ground of undue influence. The estate is made up of community property said to be partly owned by her husband, R. P. Hurlbut, who is still living at his home in San Carlos. The contest promises to be a bitter one.

Young Hurlbut, the contestant, is well known here, having graduated from Sequoia Union High school and Stanford. His boyhood was passed in Redwood City.

Supplementing tests which determined the horizontal movement of the earth's crust following the disaster of 1906, efforts are now under way by the Coast and Geodetic Survey to establish the vertical movement, according to Capt. A pine cone unearthed during mining operations near Grass Valley, Nevada county, has aroused the interest of the Carnegie Institute, and is to be examined minutely by scientists in the belief it dates back to prehistoric times. L. G. A group of big taxpayers of Alameda county will take court action to compel the return of approximately $6,500,000 paid in taxes it is announced. That figure is equivalent to half the total taxes paid to the county. It is said that there are 140 taxpayers involved and that their action will be based on an alleged error by the Board of Supervisors in fixing the tax rate "inside," which applies to the city limits of Oakland.

California's infant mortality rate was only 62.5 per thousand during the last year, the lowest in the history of the state, it is announced by the State Board of Health. The 1926 record was contrasted in the announcement with rates of 68.5 in 1925 and 67.1 in 1924. The lowest rate among the principal cities of the state last year was 33.1 in Alameda. The San Francisco rate was 49.7 and that of Los Angeles was 58.9.

Luther Burbank, internationally known naturalist, who died at Santa Rosa April 11, 1926, left an estate amounting to $168,624.22, it was disclosed when his will was admitted to probate in the superior court last week. Of this amount $62,400 represents real estate and $106,224.22 personal property, stocks, bonds and cash. His widow, Elizabeth Burbank, sole heir and executrix, filed a petition for distribution of the estate.

An anti-gangster bill, designed to prevent repetition in California of eastern crimes and underworld wars in which machine guns have been used, has been signed by Governor C. C. Young. The bill, sponsored by San Francisco police authorities and introduced by Assemblyman Leland R. Jacobson, makes it a felony for any civilian to own a machine gun. The punishment is fixed at three years in prison or a $5,000 fine, or both.

Assemblyman Frank L. Coombs' bill providing state aid in the care and treatment of crippled or physically handicapped children has been given approval by Governor Young. The legislation affects all physically handicapped persons under the age of 18 years whose relatives are financially unable to provide them with treatment. An appropriation of $45,000, including a revolving fund, is made available in carrying out the program.

An abandoned well beneath a building in Modesto's business district was discovered while renovations were being made. City Engineer Frank Rossi estimates that the well was bored forty years ago when parts of the present day business district was considered the "country." The well is 40 feet deep and 4 feet in diameter. The masonry is in excellent condition and although the well is dry it could be made to yield water with little work, Rossi said.

Governor Young and Earl Jensen, director of State institutions, will be urged to reconsider plans to establish a home for narcotic addicts in the vicinity of Sonoma. The plea, which is expected to be sent the chief executive in the form of a protest from the citizens of Sonoma, followed a caucus of more than a score of prominent business men. According to announced plans of State officials the home was to be established on the site of the former Home for Delinquent Women, destroyed by fire.

Miss Inez Moore, 28, of Yuba City and Hugh Pryce Jones, 29, deputy coroner of Sutter county, were married last week in the dome of the State Capitol, 300 feet above the ground. The ceremony was said to be the first wedding performed in the Capitol dome in sixteen years. In early days, old-timers around the statehouse recall, being married in the dome was quite a fad with brides and grooms. But, for some reason, the custom died out and best recollections are that prior to last week's ceremony, the last dome wedding was in 1911.

To keep pace with service demands, the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company is engaged in completing additional long-distance circuits between Exeter, Lindsay and Porterville, at a cost of $11,500. In this project 174 cedar poles, 477 crossarms and about sixty-seven miles, or 11,700 pounds, of copper wire will be used.

In an official order received last week from the postmaster general at Washington the Oroville post office became a first-class office. The order is effective on July 1st of this year.

Over one hundred thousand persons were massed on the slopes that recede from Carquinez straits when a varied program of the formal opening of the $8,000,000 bridge took place last Saturday. These spectators included four Governors, United States Senators and Congressmen, Mayors and civic representatives of many California cities, all guests of honor, 50,000 automobiles, it is estimated, were parked near by. The bridge was accepted over the protest of seven steamship companies, who severely criticised the protection around the central pier of the bridge and expressed fear that if a large ship should ever hit this pier, the entire bridge would collapse. A crash against one of the forty by forty foot piers cannot be forestalled with certainty, it is set forth, because of strong tides, heavy fogs and the necessity of turning vessels around numerous pier heads in the vicinity.

Pouring of concrete on the government's $1,000,000 dam at Stony Gorge, forty miles northwest of Orland, Glenn county, the second unit of the Orland colonization project, is now under way. The dam, 125 feet high and 800 feet long, will create a lake 100 feet deep, from which water will be released as needed down Stony Creek to the 20,600-acre colony. It will be completed in the fall of 1928. The project is being served by the East Park reservoir, but despite the fact that in some years the supply has not been adequate to meet requirements, the settlers have been successful. With the Stony Gorge Lake assuring a plentiful supply an active campaign for further colonization is being directed by Dr. Elwood Mead, United States Commissioner of Reclamation. Dr. Mead plans to have 5000 settlers on the land, each farming an average of twenty acres.

Improvements on Modesto's aviation field, making it one of the best airports between San Francisco and Los Angeles, have been completed. The field, a half-mile long and 600 feet wide, has been leveled and dragged until it is as smooth as a baseball diamond. A large cement marker, visible at a great height, has been placed in the center of the field. The marker is seventy-five feet long and is shaped like a cross. It takes the place of a chalk marker. The cross is a landmark and guide for airmen and it enables them to land at either end of the field, depending upon the direction of the wind. A wind cone has also been placed on the field, which shows the direction of the wind.

The United States land office at Visalia, largest in volume of receipts in America, will shortly be moved to Sacramento to be consolidated with the local office. This announcement was made in Washington by Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior. It was the original plan to move the Visalia office to Los Angeles, but this plan has been abandoned in line with the government's policy of concentrating its land offices in the capitals of the various states. The move is taken to mean that Sacramento will shortly become the principal land office of the state. The San Francisco office will be abolished and moved there on June 30th.

The Sierra Tavern, Truckee's finest hotel, and center of life for motion-picture actors, working in the mountains on snow pictures, was burned last week. The fire started in the elevator shaft and soon enveloped the entire building. Thirty-two men and women guests escaped with practically all their personal belongings. The building was five stories high and contained ninety rooms. The three upper stories had just been completed. The hotel was owned by Tim O'Hanrahan, veteran hotel man of Truckee, whose original Sierra Tavern was burned in 1923. The loss is estimated at $80,000, partly covered by insurance.

California will receive some advertising by the change in names of the West Coast Guard divisions July 1. What is now the southern division, with headquarters in San Francisco, will be known as the California division, and the old northern division, with headquarters at Seattle, will be the Northwest division. Cape Blanco, Or., will be the dividing line between the two divisions. The change in nomenclature has been made, according to Lieutenant F. L. Austin, acting division comander, because the term southern division is misleading and confused with the gulf division.

The California Olive Association will hold its sixth annual technical conference at Monterey on May 23rd, 24th and 25th, and it is expected that this meeting will be largely attended by olive men from all parts of the state. The conference will be held at the new San Carlos, Monterey's largest hotel.

Richard McIvers, the Harvard graduate who was contented to be caretaker at Deer Lick Springs, or Columbus Springs, in Trinity county, for seven years, left a will bequeathing nearly everything he had to his friend in Redding. George E. Dean, who will receive about $3,000.

In spite of the summer-like weather of the past two weeks, the snow pack is lingering longer in the high ranges of the Sierra Nevadas than it has for many years, giving new assurance of a plentiful summer water supply for the interior valleys. While the snow pack is regarded with pleasure by agriculturists and power interests, it is not so good for motorists yearning for an automobile migration into the high altitudes or over into Nevada. The deep snow blanket, well frozen, will keep many mountain highways closed to travel for some time to come.

All camping and fishing in the watersheds of the upper Tuolumne River will be discontinued this summer. This is the result of a treaty between the city of San Francisco and the Department of the Interior, National Park Service, in which the city asks that all recreational sports in that district be stopped in order that the city's water be kept pure.

Charles Archambeau, a hermit, 80 years old, lay for six days with a broken leg near the summit of Geyser Peak, Sonoma county, before he was found and brought to Geyserville recently by forest rangers.

How Sad

Mrs. Pertwee—My daughter did not feel well last week.

Mrs. Wilburton—Was it catching?

Mrs. Pertwee—Yes, and she missed him.

Decidedly So

"Bill is in a queer fix—paradoxical, I call it."

"What do you mean?"

"He's in a hole because he can't find an opening."

LIKE A GRAY DAY

First Court Official—"His Majesty seems to be under a cloud and unable to attend to affairs of state. Second Ditto—"Yes, he's like a gray day—plenty of cloud, but no reign."

An Unkind Cut

Hazel (in hat store)—How does this one look on me?

A Friend—I think that's decidedly the best. But don't you think that it wants some sort of ornament in front—I mean just to distract attention a little from the face?—Pathfinder.

Puzzling

Hamilton—I saw a doctor today and he told me to quit working.

Clem—Well, are you going to do it?

Hamilton—I don't know. The boss told me I'd better start.

Father Says It

"Father, I want your advice."

"No, son, it isn't my advice you want. It's my indorsement of something foolish you've already decided to do."

NOT HIS TOP SPEED

Sam (riding in friend's lizzie)—"Say, is this as fast as you can go?" Bill—"No, but I paid for this ride an' I ain't going to get out an' leave it in the road!"

Unanimity of Purpose

"Confound that landlord! He plans putting up the rent on me, and it's hard enough to pay it as it is."

"It's pleasant to see capital and labor working hand in hand."

"What do you mean?"

"Both of you are working for the same object, to raise the rent, aren't you?"

Abrasive Materials

There are five kinds of materials used to make abrasive papers and cloths. Flint, the crushed quartz or sand which is so familiar on sandpaper; the impure mined garnet, emery, aluminum oxide and silicon carbide.

Pessimistic Wail

What's the use of being wise or intelligent—the dumber they are the happier they seem to be.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Strait Famous in History

The strait leading from the sea of Marmora to the Black sea, on which stands the ancient city of Constantinople, is called the Bosphorus, also written Bosporus. The name means "ox-ferry." On the north side is a gulf known as the Golden horn, and this body of water forms the harbor of Constantinople.

Creates Opportunity

Every noble activity makes room for itself.—Emerson.

No Hope

"Whilst I was in town yiste'd'y," in the crossroads store, related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, "I seed a man painting the church steeple. He was setting on a seat on a rope away up yander and a lot of people stood around gawping at him. A feller bantered me for a dog swap, but I says:

"'Wait till this painter falls down, and I'll j'ine you.'

"'Shucks!' says the dog feller. 'He hain't a-going to fall. He painted it about three years ago, and didn't fall then. Come on!'"—Kansas City Star.

Electricity in Signaling

The newest use of electric lamps is secret signaling for military purposes. By properly screening signal lamps with certain materials only the infrared rays, which are invisible to the naked eye, are released. These are received at various distances by sensitive apparatus which will sound buzzers and otherwise respond to the rays even though nobody in that region except the operators is conscious of the fact that the peculiar light is being transmitted.

Donkeys' Hours for Labor

In England the donkey is very largely in evidence and frequently these little beasts are overloaded. An ordinance recently adopted by the Latham St. Anne's town council provides that no persons over sixteen years of age or weighing over 98 pounds shall ride a donkey, also that a donkey should be worked from 9 to 1 and then have an hour for luncheon, his harness being removed. After dinner he can work until 6 p. m.

Rivals

On a recent motor trip in northern Minnesota we stayed one night in a small Indian village.

On the lake shore that night the Indians danced about a huge bonfire. Sometimes 40 at a time would dance. Some would rest while others danced, but two handsome young braves danced all night.

"Upon inquiring we were told there was to be a wedding that night as soon as one of the young braves fell exhausted. It seems they were rivals for the same maiden's hand. She was willing to marry either one, and did marry the victor after several hours' dancing. —Exchange.

Parentheses

We have it on the word of Mussolini that "women are the agreeable or pleasant parentheses of life." We who had always been told they were question marks are glad that's settled now. . . . Speaking of the current styles you could call some of the fair ones exclamation points and not be far wrong. . . . Of course since the charleston has seized the land more women stand on foundations like)(than like (). . . . At that, it is a woman's influence that changed many a male 0 into a 1. . . . And in some households the lady is not only the parenthesis but the whole sentence.—Detroit News.

TEN YEARS AGO

MONDAY will be Memorial Day and on hundreds of graves in France, England, Belgium and in this country, floral offerings will testify to the love of the American people for Americans who died in the greatest war the world has ever known.

How different Memorial Day is now to what any of us would have thought it could be ten years ago. We remember this day ten years ago—the United States had just declared war—we were hardly aware that such a momentous thing had taken place. And even then we did not look forward to the grim struggle which we were entering into. It was the almost universal opinion that not a gun would need to be fired. The very fact that the United States had declared war would be enough to put an end to the carnage.

But today on hundreds of graves white crosses stand where no crosses were on that Memorial Day ten years ago. And today in hundreds of homes there is sadness for one who was not absent ten years ago.

So on Monday as we join the nation in a tribute to those who gave their lives that we might enjoy the blessings of liberty, it is with a sincere hope that in the next ten years and for decade after decade, may there be no more wars to destroy and tear down what men have labored life times to build. May war be banished, and understanding and reason take its place in the deliberations of nations. Then as Bobby Burns has said,

"It's coming yet, as come it must, and come it will for a' that,
That man to man the world o'er will brithers be for a' that."

AIDING THE ORIENT

AN opportunity for the more stable and prosperous nations of the world to assist a great republic to come into its own is seen by Senator William Borah. Borah suggests that the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan by formal agreement desist from meddling with China and allow that great nation to settle her own internal problems.

Senator Borah says in part:

"The Chinese situation presents perhaps the most vital foreign problem since the war. There are more than 400,000,000 people in China, while some 300,000,000 more sympathize thoroughly with their struggle for national independence. The entire Orient is saturated with the same feeling which actuates China. In dealing with China we are in some respects dealing with nearly one-half of the people of the globe. The conflict now raging in China may seem to us a great, aimless, hopeless sea of turmoil—nothing to command our admiration. But to millions of Chinamen it may not seem so. They may look upon it as a fight for independence, for nationhood, for national unity, for a place of equality with other powers."

Not only is China one of the largest and most populous nations of the world, but it possesses a civilization which was ancient when our ancesters were swarming in hoards through the forests of northern Europe. China has developed in a very different manner than the western nations, and a great part of the present difficulty arises from a mental feeling on the part of each race that its particular type of development is superior.

China has not made the strides in mechanical inventions which have characterized the past few years in the Occident, but it is possible that in other lines the calm Celestial has learned things that the nerve wracked machine minded Occidental has overlooked.

At any rate if left alone, China will become a great factor in the development of the world: but if the western nations allow exploiting commercial interests to dictate a harsh and co-ercive policy upon China during her time of stress that great nation will prove to be a formidable power when factional difficulties are ended.

WOODLAND THEATRE WILL BE DEDICATED SUNDAY IN HILLSBOROUGH

The Woodland Theatre of Hillsborough will be dedicated next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Great interest is being shown by all the peninsula communities in this big event. A splendid program has been arranged by the Philharmonic Society of San Mateo county, and the public is invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

Warren D. Allen will lead a chorus of 300 singers from several of the choral clubs and church choirs of the peninsula district. Many of the local high school students will also participate in the music numbers.

The choral work will be the outstanding feature of the notable program.

Arrangements have been made for adequate parking space and well regulated traffic supervision is assured. A record crowd is anticipated.

On the following Sunday, June 5, the first of this season's symphony concerts will be given. Nikolai Sokoloff will conduct the San Francisco Sythony Orchestra in a beautiful program.

Owing to the limited seating capacity of the Woodland Theater, the management announces, there will be no general admission tickets sold at the gate this season. Season books are selling at $10 and five dollars for the eight concerts. Single seats in the $10 section will sell for $2 each, and in the $5 section for $1 each. Student tickets, bought through the schools and colleges, will sell at $4 for the season.

A SICK PERSON NEEDS REST AND QUIET—NOT CALLERS

By A. H. Waterman, M. D.
Chicago, Ill.

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

When friends and relatives are ill you wish to show sympathy and to do what you can. Many times the method calculated to help does harm. My chief warning is to caution you not to make kindness a burden for the invalid. The mere fact that a person is ill, whether in an institution or at home, is proof that he requires rest.

Rest should not be limited to the physical body. In the early days of an illness and during the serious days of all illnesses mental quiet and emotional calmness are equally and many times more important than just lying in bed and taking medicine.

This mental and emotional relaxation is often destroyed by friends in their desire to show that they are sympathetic. This is partly due to habit and custom. In sparsely settled districts, where neighbors are few and where it is impossible to secure professional care, it is quite essential that assistance be given by those near at hand.

In rural districts, it is necessary to have the volunteer fireman, but as soon as conditions permit this is replaced by an organized fire department. In an illness where conditions permit it is far better for the patient to fight an illness with the assistance of expert nurses and qualified doctors than with the voluntary nursing by friends and relatives. When the patient is ill either from a disease or an accident he is fighting for his life. Whether this fight is a skirmish or a battle depends upon the nature of the difficulty; but in every combat it is essential not to exhaust the strength of the fighter with pernicious actions.

Anyone who is inclined to weep easily or is too sympathetic should not see the sick one until danger is passed, and then only for short intervals. This does not mean that the patient should be neglected; rather that he should be protected from over solicitous friends and relatives.

Another misplaced kindness is the sending of flowers. In recent days it has increased to such an extent that in many instances it does harm, though admittedly in intended kindness.

Originally, flowers were sent to appeal to the eye and to the sense of smell and possibly, before the days of aseptic surgery, to destroy some of the odors caused by disease. They are sent to show affection and sympathy, but to day in many sickrooms they have become a burden.

Many times a small fortune is spent in flowers while at the same time the invalid is wondering how he is to pay his hospital bill. In a sick room space is limited. Keeping cut flowers in the room vitiates the air and is harmful to the patient. Also flowers are usually sent during the acute stage of illness when the patient is in no condition to appreciate them; and many times the odor of the flowers is extremely distasteful to the patient.

These remarks do not apply to chronic invalids who are shut-ins. They need your visits. They should be taken for rides, entertained as best they can be. But how often they are forgotten!

DO YOU LIVE IN NO MAN'S LAND

By Joseph Patrick Kane, M. D. and J. B. McNerthney, M. D.
Tacoma, Wash.

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

There is a great strip of territory which lies between light-hearted, robust health and outright invalidism, a No Man's Land, where doctors cannot go because they are not invited and health officials can but look on and pour out advice and entreaty. Here live the children who are not happy, healthy, promising men and women of tomorrow. Adenoids and diseased tonsils like fungus growths, or parasitic vines, or rust or smut such as we see in the vegetable kingdom, are sapping their vitality and destroying their natural growth and beauty.

If their parents cannot be convinced of whether they are needing, we can do nothing, because the right of a parent, however ignorant or ill-fitted by nature or training to be a parent, always supersedes the right of the child to his best attainable physical health. With bad teeth on which digestion and nourishment depend so much, with defective vision, with pale thin little bodies, what chance have they to accomplish their destiny?

If the parents of some of these children looked on them with the same critical appraisement with which they look upon the offspring of their livestock they would not hesitate longer as to what should be done. The majority of these children can be helped, many of them transfigured into magnificent little human beings. That's where the sorrow comes in and that's why it is necessary to plead their case so strongly.

When we remember that children are the only representatives of our immortality that we can leave behind us, it is strange that they are so often dismissed with the fatalism of a Mohammedan, they are as they are.

Here in this No Man's Land live also men and women not sick to the point of prostration and not well enough to enjoy the gift of life fully. Many of them have forgotten what health is. The infirm we are at work upon are the germs which are killing them by inches found lodging in bad teeth, diseased gums, tonsils, and other nooks and crannies of their bodies, and like a slow poison are working their destruction.

Appendicitis, gall-bladder disease, heart disease, kidney disease, high blood pressure, apoplectic attacks, rheumatism, headaches—more and more we find these diseases and disabilities of middle life traceable to infections and defects which could have been prevented in childhood or in the first years of maturity. Even diabetes, on the authority of Banting, who discovered insulin, is due to infection in half the cases at least.

A Robinson says in his "Mind in the Making." "we have available knowledge and ingenuity and material resources to make a far fairer world than that in which we find ourselves." Let's make it so by doing away with "No Man's Land."

STRAWBERRIES need ICE

To keep strawberries in perfect condition, be sure the temperature is not too cold and not too dry. You lose much of the delicious flavor if the strawberries are frozen, or if they dry out. A good ice-cooled refrigerator provides exactly the right temperature and the right humidity. Only ICE does this!

THIS NURSE NOW HAS GOOD HEALTH

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and I would not be without it in the house. As I am a children's nurse, I have to be on my feet a great deal and your medicine has helped me wonderfully. I was hardly able to do my housework when I began taking it, and now I am a strong and well woman, able to do all that and go out nursing besides. I have also used the Sanative Wash and found it beneficial."—Mrs. Gertrude L. Stewart, 103 Davis St., Greenfield, Mass.

Valuable for Weakness

"I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a valuable medicine for weakness."—Mrs. J. A. Pierce, Box 397, Lancaster, Pa.

Hundreds of letters like these are received by the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Grateful women from Pennsylvania to Washington, from Texas to Illinois and from Rhode Island to Nebraska say that their health has improved since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ban on Certain Noises

Noises are civilized and uncivilized, according to law in Angora, the mushroom city established to be the inland capital of Turkey under the present administration, and edicts have been issued to end the uncivilized noises, such as the loud calls of goatherds as they drive their flocks through the streets morning and evening and the bawling shouts of the town crier advertising lost articles. Other noises, by inference, appear to be civilized and must be endured.

Feel Stiff and Achy?

TO feel constantly lame and achy is too often a sign of sluggish kidneys.

Sluggish action permits waste poisons to remain in the blood and is apt to make one languid, tired and achy, with dull headaches, dizziness and often a nagging backache. A common warning that the kidneys are not acting right is scanty or burning secretions.

Assist the kidneys at such times with Doan's Pills. Since 1885 Doan's have been winning friends the country over. Ask your neighbor!

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's:

George Facemire, 22 Orange St., Bridgeton, N. J., says: "My kidneys were not acting right and the secretions were scant and painful. Every morning I felt tired and languid and my back was so lame I had to have assistance in dressing. I started using Doan's Pills and in a short time was in splendid health. I gladly recommend Doan's."

Customary to Force Teachers to "Treat"

Forcing the teacher to "treat" the pupils was customary in Ohio rural schools in the early days, and in 1853 the practice brought about a formal opinion by the acting state commissioner of schools. The pupils of one school had, on the previous New Year's eve, taken possession of the school house and excluded the teacher and the school directors from it, announcing that they would not surrender until the teacher had agreed to treat the pupils to the amount of at least $2, relates J. H. Galbraith, Ohio historian.

It must have been a stiff fight, for the commissioner, in his opinion, said it nearly broke up the school. The problem passed to the commissioner was as to whether the teacher, who had spent $2 for the treat to restore harmony, could be compensated out of the local school funds. The commissioner ruled that the teacher was out his $2 unless he could compel the pupils to return the money.

Pulls Dirt From Hide

According to reports from War department headquarters, the vacuum process of cleaning horses and mules does a more thorough and gentler job than can be done by hand and gives the animals a thorough massage to boot. It is stated that on an average a gallon of dirt is removed from every dozen animals, and the coats take on a finer gloss.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," submitted the big fellow, "when you're headin' for Sleepy Cat, I'm headin' likewise. I ain't easy in my own mind, not a bit, since what the Scotsman says about a gurl I'm not namin'—no matter who she is. But she's worth a whole wagon-load of old buffalo bones like Dave's—not meaning no disrespect to nobody, whatsoever, at all."

"If that's the way you feel, Bill, what about me?" demanded Selwood, almost angrily. "I'm here to look out for Christie Fyler."

"That's just it, John," persisted Pardaloe, placatingly. "And to look out for Christie Fyler, now, single-handed, you know what you're up against—same as I know," snorted Pardaloe, "same as everybody here knows. That's why I say to h—ll with Thief River and Tracy; I'm trailin' you."

"But this is my fight, not yours."

"I'm makin' it mine, John."

"Stop talking, you old tub. If they can dig a grave up there big enough to hold you, I can edge into one corner of it. But, Bill"—Selwood raised one hand, simply—"who rides with me tonight ought not to care much about coming back!"

"What Do You Mean?"

Pardaloe was chewing slowly, but with the steadiness of fate. "Nothin' particular, as I know of, John, callin' me anywheres back."

"Come along, Bill!"

A further parley was held; Tracy at last pleaded to be taken back to Sleepy Cat, and, as everybody else was for it, Selwood gave in. It was arranged that Pardaloe should ride with Selwood and Scott, and that McAlpin should follow in the wagon with Tracy.

While Tracy's cot was hastily set back in the wagon and the horses were being got up, Selwood took the ammunition out from under the seat—a slender store, but, like a shower, a life-saver in a drought—and apportioned it into three parcels among Pardaloe, Scott, and himself.

It lacked but little of daybreak when the three men reached the river again. Fording the stream, the horsemen secreted their horses in the undergrowth below the river bench, and climbed up the nearest gully to the flats, that were being laid out for a railroad yard. Spreading out again, the three men circled this open space singly and without molestation, and came together on higher ground, where they could reconnoiter the town.

The fires that had lighted the sky earlier in the night had died down—chiefly for lack of material for the flames. An important part of Sleepy Cat lay in ruins, though the extent of the destruction was hidden in the darkness. One quarter of the straggling settlement had escaped the torch and the Vigilantes and the reprisals of the outlaws—this was the corner embracing the stage barns, Carpy's hotel, and the new railroad station.

From the hill where they had halted, Selwood and his companions, recovering their horses, made their way under such cover as they could singly, to the stage barns.

Lefever met them. Selwood asked for the news. Lefever pointed to a pile of smoking ruins down the hill. "Some of them river rats have burned the bunk-house on us, John," said Lefever. "That's the way they keep their promises!"

"McAlpin told me nothing of that," exclaimed Selwood, looking angrily down the hill.

"Didn't know it was on fire when he started," returned Lefever. "But I'm telling you the teamsters are rarin' to go. They're only waiting for you."

"Just hold 'em till I get some bearings," was all Selwood replied.

Bull Page took the steaming horses back to their stalls, and Scott was sent out to scout. Lefever told Selwood and Pardaloe what more he could of the situation; Starbuck, who had been missing for a time at the outset, had taken the gamblers' fight in hand at a moment when the Vigilantes were driving all before them; turned the tables on the clean-up men, and now held the survivors of their disorganized force at bay in the unfinished railroad station. Starbuck had sent word by messenger that he would give them an hour to get out of the station and out of the town—coupled with the threat that if they didn't move they would be burned out by daylight. Starbuck's men, Lefever added, held the only building left in the River Quarter, where most of the burning had been—Bunty Bartoe's place down next the river; it had escaped the flames. In the upper town Carpy's hotel, which had been gutted, the gamblers had spared. He knew nothing about Christie.

Pardaloe had been dispatched to the station with the ammunition. He came back with a long face, but a long face was nothing new for Pardaloe. Carpy, wounded, was there treating the wounded, who lay on the floor in the freight room. There was only a pretense of a guard kept about the building; within it, disgruntled Vigilantes nursed their grievances, railing chiefly at one another; and in one corner, with nobody to command, owing to lack of ammunition, Old General Roper, though hit, was maintaining headquarters, with neither head, as Pardaloe tartly put it, nor quarters. The only thing that prevented the refugees from running away was the fear of getting shot if they put their noses outside.

Selwood felt he must first of all see and learn what he could from Carpy. Directing his few companions to stick together and telling Lefever to throw out a stronger guard about the barn, Selwood started for the station.

By skirting the river bank and working from one to another of the breaks in the beach, he reached the rear door of the station without drawing any fire either from its defenders or its besiegers. He pushed open the door and entered the hall without being opposed or observed. A glance was enough to reveal to Selwood's unsympathetic scrutiny the complete demoralization of the Vigilante element. It was almost by accident that Abe Cole, the bandaged but still fighting blacksmith, saw Selwood and, running toward him, greeted him with a shout that drew attention to the long-hoped-for arrival of the taciturn gambler. As men, wounded and unwounded, crowded about him, he eyed the scar-faced, blurting blacksmith, coldly, paying no attention whatever to his effusive welcome.

"You running this thing, Abe?"

"Running it?" echoed Abe hoarsely. "I was running it—nobody's running it. They wouldn't do a thing I told 'em to do," declared Cole, with a plentiful sprinkling of profanity; "now they're cornered, jus' as I told 'em they'd be if they didn't obey orders, and there's about as much fight in 'em now as there is in a bunch of jack-rabbits!"

Selwood, ignoring impatient interpleaders that raised their voices, some abusing the blacksmith and some one another, looked about the two rooms. The figure that instantly arrested his attention was that of Carpy, his head swathed in a wild-looking bandage, moving about among his wounded, who, filling one corner, lay on the floor in various attitudes of prostration, anger, and disgust.

Selwood, silencing those closest, spoke to Cole. "I sent what cartridges I could rake up, Abe; it's all I know of this side of Medicine Bend, outside what Starbuck's got. So I'd advise you not to pass any of 'em out to the jack-rabbits; put 'em in the hands of men that will use 'em."

"The teamsters, your men, are standing up," blurted out Abe. "They stopped 'em from rushing us an hour ago. But they ain't got six rounds apiece left. Starbuck will come back."

Selwood's glance had wandered. "Hello, Doc," he said as he saw Carpy elbowing his way toward him.

Carpy, wounded and infuriated, was grateful but glum. Selwood reached for the bloody hand stretched out. He listened with patient attention to the wrought-up surgeon, who tried to explain the wreck of their plans, though with an expression in his eyes that indicated his mind wandered.

Looking over the shoulders of those around him, Selwood saw the cowed spirit of the Vigilantes. One exception attracted his attention: one man appeared profoundly indifferent to the fortunes of the night. In a comfortable chair in the farthest corner of the second room, his bald head in a huge fur cap well pulled down, and his hands clasped in his lap, sat the queer pioneer trader of Sleepy Cat and of the mountain country—old man Van Tambel. Everything he had in the world had but just gone up in the smoke of Fort street, but the tragedy had apparently failed to shake his spirit. Composed and collected he struck Selwood as an odd contrast to the welter of wrangling, confusion, and cowardice about him. The gambler silently laughed.

He turned his eyes on Cole. "Well," he said in response to many words from several mouths, "you've made a mess of it. They've got you cornered. Where are the bums that licked you hanging out? Does anybody know?"

He was assured that Bartoe's place was the only building that had escaped the flames in the River quarter.

"That's where they are, then," was Selwood's comment.

"What are you going to do?" sputtered Cole.

"I'll take what men I've got with me at the barn and go after 'em."

"Wouldn't it be better to fight 'em here, John?" asked Cole.

"You're licked here," retorted Selwood. "If Starbuck stuck his head in the door most of these fellows would jump into the river. Get back to your wounded"—he took Carpy's arm—"looks to me, they're about all the fighting blood you've got left here."

As he spoke, he drew the surgeon apart. "You know the reason I'm in this mess, Doc," he said sternly and without wasting words. "Where is Christie Fyler?"

Carpy, controlling his excitement, caught Selwood's arm in his hand. "That's why I wanted you, quick as you could get here. So help me God, I don't know where the girl is, John. I only wish I did. This evening she and her father took supper at the hotel. I warned Christie privately to stay close—I couldn't trust Fyler with anything. Starbuck," said Carpy with a curse, "was prancing around her and had the gall to try to stay to supper with 'em. I knowed Christie would stick close and would be all right, but I never figured on us getting drove like this. When I seen what was coming I run up to the hotel and told all hands to light out for the depot. I run to Christie's room myself and told her what was up, and to make for the depot—"

"Why didn't you bring her there yourself?" demanded Selwood.

"She wouldn't leave without her father," protested Carpy, defending himself, "and the dashed old mule wouldn't budge—I couldn't take her from him—she wouldn't go."

"So you left her there!"

"What else could I do?"

"Knock him on the head and drag her here, yourself," said Selwood savagely. He made no effort to restrain himself, and his words fell like whip lashes. "You knew her danger," he thundered; "she didn't! So you left her there!" exclaimed the gambler, sardonic in his wrath. "A fine mess you've made of it!"

"John," protested Carpy, "I'll go over there this minute with you, myself—"

"Stay where you are. What was the number of her room?"

"Twelve, at the top of the front stairs. John, I don't want you to go off mad this way. I did what I could—I tell you she wouldn't leave her father."

Selwood paused only to make a brief amend for his outbreak and to promise to return; he told Carpy he was going to look for Christie at the hotel—though in his heart he had no hope of finding her there.

On a table close at hand, where the doctor had set his instrument-case and dressings, stood a lighted pocket-lantern. Selwood, picking it up, closed the slide, put it out, and slipped it into his coat pocket.

"Hey!" exclaimed Carpy, "don't take that!"

"I may need it," said Selwood.

Walking toward the door with Selwood, Carpy pointed to one of the wounded men on the floor near where they were passing. He lay on his back, with his eyes closed, and his stertorous breathing was noticeable. "There's the old general," he said, "hit pretty bad, too; want to speak to him?"

"No," blurted out Selwood.

"He may die," observed Carpy critically.

Selwood was brutally resentful. "He won't need me to help him," was all he said. And flinging open the back door, he took one look out into the hall, slammed the door behind him, and slipped out into the night.

On the town side of the station he could hear sporadic firing, answered at intervals by the fringe of guards defending the railroad building. He met no opposition on the way to the hotel. It was far enough out of the line of fighting to have been overlooked. He scouted about the building for a minute, and entered through a side door which he found unlocked, opening into the dining-room. Without risking a light, he felt his way across to the hall, picking up a wood-bottomed chair as he did so, and pausing at intervals to listen for sound. He could hear nothing anywhere, and walking up the front stairs without much attempt to avoid the inevitable creaking of the treads, he felt along the wall for the door of room number twelve. Laying his hand after a moment on the knob, he tried it. The door was unlocked. Without opening it, he knocked softly. There was no response. He listened intently for sounds of breathing, but could hear none. He then set the chair in front of the closed door, lifted from his coat pocket the dark lantern, lighted it, set it facing the door on the chair, pulled back the slide of the bull's-eye, drew his revolver, and, standing to one side, threw the door quickly open; if a shot were to come from within, the lantern should draw it.

But no shot was hurled at him, no response of any sort was made to the rude intrusion; the silence was almost ghostly. Selwood picked the lantern up from the chair, threw its light rays from side to side of the room, and, crossing the threshold with unabated caution, looked about him.

The bed had not been disturbed. Selwood lighted a lamp. One of Christie's familiar straw hats lay on the bureau. Beside it he saw a pair of gloves that he took up in his hand, felt of, and looked at. The simple toilet articles of a frontier girl, the brush and comb and lesser feminine accessories, together with a black leather belt and a handkerchief, lay at hand.

Everything gave mute evidence that the defenseless owner had been spirited away, or had fled without a moment's warning.

To find himself standing thus surrounded by her most intimate belongings — belongings so familiar, some of them, to his observant eyes that in looking at them he was stirred to a frenzy at the thought of danger coming to her—was too much.

Without allowing himself to linger a moment where sweetness seemed still to exhale from her former presence, Selwood jerked the counterpane from under the frightened cat, and dumped into it, man-fashion, Christie's belongings. He then emptied the bureau drawers, caught up and tied the counter pane corners into a sling, and, catching the bundle up on one arm, hastened down the stairs and rejoined his men at the barn.

CHAPTER XIII

Barbanet Is Persuaded.

Selwood got back without further incident, and deposited his queer-looking bundle with care inside a cupboard in the harness-room. Scott had returned and had covered the River quarter, unmolested. His report confirmed all information that Bunty Bartoe's place had not been burned, and, Scott added, was now noisy with Starbuck's following, who, passing in and out, were celebrating their victory.

"Is Starbuck there?" asked Pardaloe.

It was a question Scott could not answer.

Selwood's mind worked as he listened. "I've got to know for sure where Starbuck is," he said, his eyes moving from face to face of those listening about him. "Where's Bull Page?" he asked after a moment's thought. "Get him here quick."

Facing Selwood within a moment and alone with him in the office, the dilapidated but amiable Bull looked as surprised in being summoned at such a moment by the boss as the other men were.

Selwood spoke to him kindly and without haste, and asked an odd question: "Bull, you haven't done the world very much good in your eventful lifetime, have you?"

Poor Bull, greatly taken aback, countered with a sickly smile. "Well—I—hope I ain't done nobody a whole lot o' harm—have I, John?" he asked in his quavering, throaty tones.

"Not to anybody except yourself, Bull, if the truth be told," replied Selwood evenly. "Not half as much harm as I've done, Bull, by a long shot. But tonight there's a chance for both of us to do something for somebody. You've seen that young girl whose father kept the mock-auction store down street, one of the stores that were burned tonight?"

Bull nodded. "I seen her, John."

"Somewhere in this row she's got lost. I'm afraid she's fallen into bad hands. You never can tell what will happen, you know, a night like this."

"Wouldn't want no wimmin folks of mine mixed up in it."

"Then listen," continued Selwood. "I've seen you many times drunk, Bull, trying to make me think you were sober."

Bull nodded as if confessing to the indictment.

"Tonight I want you sober, trying to make everybody else think you're drunk."

Bull saw a flash of humor in the suggestion. "That," he returned, his chin pushed well down into his throat, "ain't goin' to be so awful hard, John, I don't think."

"There's one feature you may not like. But you're entitled, fair and square, to know it now. We may one of us or both of us, get killed."

"Willing to go where you go, John," he replied simply.

Selwood showed his own surprise at the unassuming assent by a longer breath than usual. "John Barleycorn spoiled a man when he got you, Bull," he observed, regarding him gravely.

Bull's smile had long been in rags, but it shone brave through the tatters of his seamy face. He said nothing.

Selwood believed that if any man at the barn could get into Bartoe's that night alive, it would be Bull Page. Bull, though janitor at Selwood's place, left his wages impartially at the various dives along the river front. He thus enjoyed a certain standing in the lower town as well as the upper, and he moved without prejudice among the different factions of the town.

"I don't want to ask you to do anything I wouldn't do myself—if I could," said Selwood, explaining to Bull what he meant to attempt. "But you can get through doors barred against me and against any stranger; and with you to guarantee a stranger, I might make it. Anyway, Bull, if you're game we'll try; and they won't get us both without some kind of a hearing."

Pardaloe and McAlpin were called in. "If you'll hold your men together here a while," said Selwood to Lefever, "we'll know exactly what we are going to do. In, say, ten minutes, John, bring all of them that want to fight down to Bartoe's and maybe they can be accommodated. I'm taking Bull Page with me, and suppose you and Scott come along, Bill," he added to Pardaloe. "If we don't all of us get back, some of us might."

"What are you going to do?" asked Lefever.

"I'm going down to Bartoe's to look around."

Scott, with the quickest instinct of his listeners, looked at the gambler with a skeptical smile. "You're not going inside?"

"I am, if I can make it," returned Selwood. He began to unbutton his coat. "And I'll borrow your hat and coat and boots if you're willing Bob," he added. As he spoke he took a cap of McAlpin's hanging on a nearby hook and stuffed it into his trousers pocket.

Scott began to take off his coat. Lefever sat partly on the table, with one leg swinging over the edge. He slipped uneasily from his perch and stood before Selwood.

"John," he asked, "what are you actually going to do? You don't honestly mean you are going to try to go into Bunty's place tonight?"

"Why not?"

Lefever eyed him with indignation and contempt. "You're looking to quit, sure."

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

Butte Takes Lead in Copper

FOR about 30 years, Butte, Mont., has been a copper mining district, with lead and zinc, as well as silver and gold, as important by-products of the main industry. As early as 1864 mines to become famous as copper producers, such as the Park, Parrot and Original, had been located, but no ore was known to exist in the famous Anaconda hill. Patent for the claim there was not applied for until 1878.

The big developments in Butte copper began in 1872 when William A. Clark, later to be United States senator and one of the most picturesque of American multimillionaires, turned his attention to that field. In the next two years he developed such mines as the Colusa, Mountain Chief and Gambetta.

In the early period of copper mining ore was sometimes shipped as far as Baltimore, Md., to be smelted and there was a recorded instance when ore carrying $130 a ton in copper and $50 a ton in gold and silver returned no profit because of the excessive mining, freight and smelting costs. It was natural under those circumstances that the smelting industry should develop rapidly. Early methods were crude, but much capital went into the venture and its growth was swift.

Marcus Daly, next to Clark the most picturesque figure in Butte history, entered the district in 1876 as the representative of the Salt Lake mining interests and in 1881 began treating ore from the Anaconda ledge as representative of the newly organized Anaconda Silver Mining company, from which has developed gradually the great Anaconda Copper company of today, probably the largest copper mining, smelting and manufacturing concern in the entire world.

Butte's period of great prosperity arrived when the railroads first entered that camp. In 1881 the Utah Northern reached Butte, giving an outlet via Ogden, Utah, to the Union Pacific lines and the markets of the world. Later the Montana Central and the Montana Union railroad, now owned by the Northern Pacific system, effected their entry.

As an example of the richness of properties worked by the big companies of the Butte district it is recorded in the volumes of the United States geological survey that from 1884 until 1898 the Anaconda produced 9,575,793 tons of ore, which yielded 1,068,922,500 pounds of copper. The ore ran 5¼ per cent copper and gave also 4½ ounces of silver and 35 cents worth of gold per ton. As long ago as 1887 Butte passed the Lake Superior district to become the leading North American center of copper production, and not many years later it had attained world supremacy. As much as 20 years ago Butte was furnishing one-fifth of the world's copper, three-fourths of this percentage coming from the company then known as "Amalgamated Copper."

This huge percentage in world production has not been maintained in later years, but Butte interests have purchased large copper properties in South America to make up in part the relative decrease in production.

More About Diamonds

BEFORE either Brazil or South Africa became known as a source of diamonds the world had looked to India for its supplies. For centuries India was the only place where diamonds were mined and the potentates of the world sought there the sparkling gems for coronet and scepter.

The diamonds first discovered in Brazil were sold as Indian diamonds, partly because diamonds from India were the standard of that day, just as today we speak of Scotch "tweed," and partly because the Brazilian government soon put a heavy penalty on private mining. This made it necessary for smugglers to get their diamonds from Brazil to India before they could be offered on the market with the true source thoroughly concealed.

Diamantina, Brazil, chief center of the diamond industry, became the seat of a royal Portuguese diamond monopoly in the Eighteenth century, when Brazil was a colony of Portugal. All mining was turned over to contractors who paid the crown high prices per slave for the right to work the mines, and also turned in 20 per cent of their profits. Notwithstanding this heavy overhead, many of these contractors made mammoth profits.

Corruption and violence was the natural accompaniment of so much sudden and easy wealth. The government not infrequently despoiled its contractors as soon as they had amassed a real fortune. When an old building in Diamantina was made into a school building a few years ago a dozen or more skeletons were found lying at the bottom of a secret shaft. Natives took this as a verification of a very old legend of the place, which was that a famous diamond buyer, who once lived in the old building, had fixed up a trap door over a shaft, with a chair on the tricky spot in the floor. The unhappy men who came with diamonds to sell, if they happened to be unknown to the town, were motioned to a "comfortable" seat, the trap was sprung, and that was that.

Preacher a Wanderer

George Fox, the founder of the Friends, or Quakers, religious sect, was, in his early life, an apprentice to a shoemaker, but he forsook his craft to wander from village to village in England, preaching. He proclaimed everywhere that he "was sent of the Lord into the world" and also that he was "forbidden to take off his hat to any one." NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Nungesser Lost in Paris-to-New York Flight—Mid-west Storm Swept.

By EDWARD J. PICKARD

FIRST to attempt the nonstop flight from Paris to New York for the Orteig prize, and first to fail, Capt. Charles Nungesser, famous French ace, and Maj. Francois Coli are believed at this writing to have been lost somewhere in the North Atlantic. Their plane, "White Bird," was last seen off the southern coast of Ireland. It vanished in the ocean mists and intensive search by French, American and English vessels failed to reveal its fate. Near the week's end there were still those who believed the unfortunate aviators might be found in some cove of the Newfoundland or Nova Scotia coast or on some small vessel that had no wireless. But the hope was exceedingly slender.

At first the blame for the failure of Nungesser's flight was placed by the Paris press on the United States weather bureau, the assertion being made that the flyers were duped by incorrect weather reports from America, and the French people were so aroused by this that Ambassador Herrick cabled advising American entrants in the contest to delay their start. The story was found to be utterly false, and General Delicambre, head of the French weather bureau, assumed full responsibility for the advices on weather conditions given to Nungesser and Coli before they hopped off. Clarence Chamberlin and Lloyd Bertaud, seeing no further reason for delay, made all preparations to start their flight from New York in the big Wright-Bellanca plane; and Capt. Louis Lindbergh, veteran air-mail pilot, flew his entry, the Ryan plane, from San Diego to New York with the intention of hopping off for Paris in a few days. Lindbergh flies alone.

FOR three days eight states of the Middle West were subjected to the fury of the weather. Tornadoes, torrential rains and, in the higher altitudes, severe blizzards prevailed, and reports from the widely scattered regions that suffered showed that nearly 250 persons had lost their lives and about one thousand had been injured. The property losses were very heavy. First destruction was wrought in Kansas, where a twister roared in from the southwest. There followed tornadoes that lashed Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Illinois, flattening farmhouses and buildings in rural sections and laying towns and villages in waste.

Twice the storms struck at Missouri, in a dozen communities in the central part of the state and at Poplar Bluff, in the southeastern section. The known dead at Poplar Bluff stood at 101, with scores injured and the heart of the city devastated. Ten persons were killed in central Missouri, three by high wind at St. Louis and two by twisters near Springfield.

Arkansas was swept from the southern section to the northeastern counties by a series of twisters. Latest reports placed the dead at 70 and the injured at more than three hundred. The death list in Texas, where tornadoes struck at two points, reached 35.

MORE money is needed for the relief of the Mississippi valley flood victims. The $10,000,000 fund was oversubscribed, but the Red Cross officials announced that the amount raised was insufficient to care for the work in hand. All Red Cross chapters were urged to exceed their original quotas. The latest serious development is the breaking out of smallpox among the refugees of the Boeuf river section of Louisiana, where an epidemic was feared. Large supplies of vaccine and of typhoid prophylaxis were hurried to that region. Desperate efforts were made to build up the levees along south central Louisiana, at which the flood waters were hammering. The state levee board officials believed the embankment would hold, but naval aviators who flew over the region said they thought the fight to save the Bayou des Glaises levee was practically lost.

REAR ADMIRAL LATIMER issued a warning to all armed forces in Nicaragua that they would have to surrender their arms peaceably to the American troops there or submit to disarmament by force. This order applies to the Conservatives as well as the Liberal rebels, and the latter are to receive from the Diaz government payment of $10 for each rifle or machine gun surrendered. The possibility that force might be required to persuade some of the belligerents led Admiral Latimer to ask that 800 more marines be sent him. Four hundred were started at once from Quantico, and 400 were embarked at Charleston, S. C., and Port-au-Prince, Haiti. An aviation detachment and six airplanes was sent from Quantico, and another aviation detail with three planes was ready to proceed from San Diego by commercial transportation.

To assist General Moncado, Liberal commander in chief, in persuading his troops to lay down their arms, Henry L. Stimson, personal representative of President Coolidge, wrote the general this letter after their conference at Tipitapa:

"Confirming our conversation of this morning, I have the honor to inform you that I am authorized to say that the President of the United States intends to accept the request of the Nicaraguan government to supervise the elections of 1928; that the retention of President Diaz during the remainder of his term is regarded as essential to that plan and will be insisted upon; that a general disarmament of the country is also regarded as necessary for the proper and successful conduct of such elections, and that the forces of the United States will be authorized to accept the custody of the arms of those willing to lay them down, including the government, and to disarm forcibly those who will not do so."

AMERICAN foreign policy scored heavily when Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, announced in the house of commons that Great Britain had acceded to the view of the United States and would not send further notices to China or apply sanctions for the Nanking outrages. After a full review of the facts the British decided the application of force would be inexpedient, however justified, and Great Britain has informed all the other interested powers of this fact, Sir Austen said. He announced, however, that Great Britain will hold whatever government emerges from the chaos of the present Cantonese split responsible for the Nanking acts, demanding reparations and compensations.

The British government notified Washington it was ready to co-operate in abrogating extraterritorial rights in China, and our State department announced that this government stands prepared to enter into negotiations for the abolishment of extraterritoriality with any government of China or delegates who can speak for China.

Dr. C. C. Wu, upon assuming the office of foreign minister of the Nanking government, declared that government has no intention of using force against the Shanghai foreign settlement. When the proper time arrives the Nationalists will take up the question of the international settlement diplomatically, as well as the entire treaty situation.

The Nationalists of Nanking and Hankow have dropped their quarrel for a time to form a united front against Marshal Chang Tso-lin. General Feng is reported moving eastward to drive the Manchurian from Peking.

IN ACCORDANCE with a decision by Supreme Court Justice Peters of New York, $2,500,000 raised in the United States for the "Irish Republic" does not belong to either the Irish Free State or Eamon de Valera, former President of the republic and trustee for the bondholders. Instead, the sum is to be returned to the subscribers after the heavy expenses of the long litigation are deducted. The immediate return to the subscribers will be made still smaller by another factor. The republic campaigners raised $6,000,000 in the United States. Of this all but the $2,500,000 affected by this decision was sent to Ireland during the struggle to establish in the island a sovereign and single nation. The $2,500,000, therefore, must be spread over a wide field by pro rata distribution.

The outstanding detail of the decision is that Justice Peters finds the Irish republic never existed. He holds the republican movement never got beyond the revolt stage.

MRS. RUTH SNYDER and Henry Judd Gray, convicted in the sensational New York trial of the murder of Albert Snyder, the woman's husband, were sentenced to death in the electric chair. The treatment of this case by the press was notable for the lack of the familiar and disgusting "sob stories," and the verdict of the jury has been received with general approval. Even Gray says it was "wise and sensible."

In a somewhat similar case in Newton, N. J., a jury, five members of which were women, brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree against Frank Van Sickle, who slew the husband of his paramour and sought to blame the woman for his crime. He goes to prison for life.

AN AMAZING scheme to blow up the Illinois penitentiary at Stateville and rescue one or more of the prisoners was devised by an escaped murderer and was foiled only by the alertness of the guards and keepers, who would not let him drive his automobile through the gates. After a fight they arrested him and easily obtained a full confession. Dressed in the black suit and Roman collar of a Catholic priest and armed with revolvers, nitroglycerin and a supply of mustard gas, the escaped convict, William Evans, made his daring attempt in order to repay the man who helped him escape from the Missouri penitentiary at Jefferson City in 1923. That man, he says, is Harry Funk, who is serving a ten-year term at Stateville for bank swindle.

FOLLOWING a recent ruling of the Philippines Supreme court that the governor general has full power over government controlled institutions, Governor General Wood announced that the government is going out of business in the islands and that its holdings in commercial enterprises, involving about $50,000,000, will be sold to the highest responsible bidders. Immediately afterward he handed control of the Manila Railroad company, one of the corporations in which the government owns the majority of the stock, over to Filipinos, by giving the natives a majority on the board of directors of the company. Management of the company also was left in native hands.

JUDGE PURDY of the United States District court in Shanghai sentenced Leonard Husar, former United States district attorney for China, to serve two years in the United States penitentiary at McNeil's island, Washington, and a fine of $3,000 in gold for accepting a bribe of $34,000 from an opium ring. Judge Purdy also sentenced Neil McKay Heath of Georgia, Husar's accomplice, to 18 months' imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

MONDAY was a great day for Australia, for the new federal capital, Canberra, was formally occupied when the temporary parliament buildings were opened by the duke of York. Fifty thousand persons attended the ceremonies and every one of the British dominions was represented. The city of Canberra, which is about 200 miles from Sydney, has an area of 12 square miles. It was designed by a Chicago architect, Walter Burley Griffin, who won first prize in a plan competition. The entire federal district comprises 912 square miles, and strict prohibition prevails there by law.

THE Treasury department has called the $1,700,000,000 outstanding of the second Liberty loan, the bonds to be paid on November 15, the tenth anniversary of their issuance. Opportunity may be offered by the treasury to exchange these bonds for other government securities if cash is not desired. Notice of the call was advertised in every daily, weekly and semi-weekly newspaper in the United States printed in English, by placards, in all post offices and banks and by radio.

"Survival of Fittest" False Social Doctrine

The doctrine that only the fit should survive is false as applied to human welfare, John A. Lapp, Chicago, president of the national conference of social work, declared in opening the gathering at Des Moines.

"The competitive struggle must be governed by better rules," he said. "Such an idea is a blow below the belt."

Mr. Lapp asserted that 90 per cent or more of all poverty in the United States was due to injustice or unavoidable causes.

"War, floods and tornadoes; sickness, underemployment; accident and mental deficiency, death or desertion, inadequate wages, business failures and dependent old age are the chief cause of poverty and not, as many people claim, the unfitness of individuals," he continued.

"Selfish interests are reviving the discredited doctrine of survival of the fittest as a means of supporting opposition to any form of government regulation which might interfere with their own aims.

"No previous time in the history of the country has seen such a concerted movement to break down the confidence of the people in their government as instrument for human betterment."

In many ways, he said, the course of social life has been entirely changed by legislative action. He cited the workmen's compensation law as an example.

THEIR NEW-FOUND FRIEND

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

HESTER stood at the window watching her father and brother, who were busy with the late fall plowing. Across the room her younger sister, Hulda, was finishing a round-robin letter to their mother.

"I've emphasized the air and quiet and the view. I'm sure she will hurry up and get well when she reads this," Hulda said.

The Gordons had come to the mountain farm barely a fortnight before. Mrs. Gordon's health, added to a long-cherished desire of Mr. Gordon's to try farming, had brought them out of the city. An advertisement, a quick sale, and the transfer was made from the small city apartment to the gray farmhouse on Berry brook. Mrs. Gordon had remained at a friend's until she should be a little stronger.

"Hulda! See who is coming!" Hester exclaimed.

Hulda sprang to her sister's side. It was the first time they had seen a passer-by, and the approaching figure, oddly overalled and astride a brown horse, filled them with curiosity.

"A girl! I thought at first it was a boy. She's coming here!" Hester opened the door. The visitor had leaped from her horse and stood on their doorstep. Her dark eyes, set far apart in her freckled face, smiled with shy friendliness.

"Good morning!" Hester spoke civilly in spite of her amazement. She had never seen anybody like this. "What do you want?" she asked, rather at loss.

A change came over the freckled face. Glancing away in embarrassment the girl's eyes fell upon a gayly flowering plant in the window.

"I—I just wondered if you'd let me have a little piece of that?" she said.

"Certainly." But Hester broke off the tiniest bit possible. She was keeping that plant tenderly as part of the welcome intended for her mother. Taking the slip, the girl murmured thanks and went away quickly. The sisters stared after her in wonderment.

"Went right back the way she came," Hulda said. "Wasn't it odd, her asking for that slip? Do you suppose that was really what she stopped for in the first place?"

At dinner she asked the same question of her father.

"I didn't know there was another soul besides ourselves in this hollow," he returned, intent on his own thoughts.

During the next few days the novelty of their new home began to wear away and Hester and Hulda felt an increasing oppression of loneliness and silence. But they bravely kept their feelings hidden from their father and Don.

The bright, warm weather that had greeted their arrival in the mountains had changed and cold was setting in. The girls were obliged to stay in the house and they got out their school books and began a course of study. Next year if all went well they would be able to continue their education and they wished to be well prepared.

There came a joyful day. Mrs. Gordon had written that she was coming home.

Don took the team and went to the village to meet his parents the afternoon upon which they were expected to return. The train was due at three, but he started early, for the station was ten miles away and the road very rough.

It had been a gray day with a nipping wind. The girls were startled at a slash of rain upon the windows. Then the rain poured down, the wind whistled round the house, making it fairly rock on its foundations. Darkness fell early.

"They ought to be home by this time," Hulda said anxiously.

But they did not come.

When ten o'clock came the girls lay down upon their bed, but without removing their clothes. It was broad daylight when they awakened.

Rubbing her eyes, Hester arose and went to the window. Next instant she screamed.

Ice—ice everywhere, ice that glittered like silver in the rising sun. The trees were weighted down with their crystal burden, the ground was a skating pond. Beautiful but terrible! The two girls stared, appalled at the strange sight.

At that instant the old apple tree by the porch split asunder and fell with a thunderous crash.

"The barn!" gasped Hester. "The roof will give way, Hulda."

Mr. Gordon had engaged a village carpenter to put it in shape to withstand the snows of winter, but such ice as this was heavier than much snow. In the barn was the precious cream-giver, Buttercup. Fully aware of the danger that threatened the cow the girls hastened to get her out if they could.

As Hester lifted the barn-door latch there came just such another crack as had preceded the wreck of the apple tree. She drew back, for one instant afraid. Buttercup must have sensed her own peril for she mooed loudly.

It was no easy matter to move the heavy stanchion that confined Buttercup's head. The girls tugged frantically while above them the barn whispered as if a thousand rats were running about. At last the post moved. Buttercup was free.

But the stable door was jammed.

In order to get her out of the barn the girls had to lead her across the main floor. While Hester led her by a rope, Hulda urged her on from behind. Like all animals at such a time, Buttercup behaved most stubbornly.

The girls had succeeded in getting her close to the large outer doors by which they had entered when there came another crack and that portion of the building they had just left settled to the ground. The jar loosened a big beam, which fell, just missing Hester, and jammed against the big doors, fastening them tight.

Through a cloud of dust the girls stared at each other in horror. The rest of the barn might collapse upon them at any instant.

"Hello! Hello! Hello!" Voices were shouting outside.

"Hello!" shouted back Hester, as loudly as she could.

There came the sound of an ax, of boards being ripped off. Through the opening appeared a face peering in upon them anxiously.

More boards were ripped off and their rescuers, a man and a big boy, entered. In a moment the girls and the cow were safe.

Then it was that Hester saw in the background the same freckled girl who had come to the door a week before.

"Nothing would do but Nancy had to come and see if you were all right," the man said.

"Well, what are neighbors for, dad?" retorted Nancy.

Neighbors! Hester thought of the skimpy bit of begonia, of her curt "What do you want?" In that moment she and Hulda both learned a lesson in neighborliness that they were never to forget.

All the morning Mr. Norton and his son worked hard to save the rest of the barn from disaster, and so successful was their accomplishment that by noon Buttercup was safely housed and munching her dinner as calmly as if nothing had happened.

"We haven't lived on this brook much longer than you have, but we are old hands at farming," Nancy said as she departed.

Half an hour later Don drove up with his parents. They had made their way home with difficulty, half wild with anxiety for the girls after noting the effects of the ice storm along the way.

Don had found a telegram instead of his folks at the station. A delay had occurred at the last moment and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon had been obliged to wait for the early morning train. One of the horses had cast a shoe and had to be shod, and as the storm had by that time begun Don decided to stay all night in the village.

Within twenty-four hours the ice had vanished. The weather had again grown mild. And Hester and Hulda were going up the road to carry the whole begonia as a neighborly offering to their new friend, Nancy Norton.

White House Renovation

In the spring of 1903 President Roosevelt and his family moved to 22 Jackson place when the remodeling of the White House was begun. After a summer at Oyster Bay they also spent the fall in their temporary quarters. There has been no other occasion, since the White House was rebuilt following its destruction during the War of 1812, when necessary repairs could not be made without disturbing its ocupants. Roofing, painting, etc., have usually been managed during summer vacations.

Assimilation of Iron

Vitamine E, known to be present in wheat germ oil and to be associated in some way with the prevention of sterility, has now been found to be associated with iron assimilation in the body, reports Hygeia Magazine. When appropriate amounts of vitamine E are given during pregnancy, the death of the unborn does not occur. An interesting fact in this connection is that liver, which has recently been found valuable for the control of anemia, is rich not only in iron but also in vitamine E.

Apprenticeship System

The custom of requiring a beginning worker to serve a period of preliminary training and learning before being permitted to follow his trade or craft reaches back at least as far as the Sixteenth century. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth it was enacted that no person should work at any trade without serving an apprenticeship of seven years.

Ancient Carpet Fair Made Holiday Event

Most important of the fairs in North Africa is the native carpet market of Kairwan, which is held annually. Kairwan, ancient religious metropolis of Tunis, is still adorned with beautiful mosques, including the Berber mosque in which several strands of the prophet's hair are kept. The market begins on the third day of the greatest Mussulman feast. Many nomads and sedentaries from various parts of the Sahara take this opportunity to leave their tents or villages and make their way to the city on foot or camelback. When not admiring the carpets on exhibit in the holy city's shops they pray in the mosques or seek the native dance places to forget the manifold cares of life. Kairwan attracts also American and European tourists and buyers and other "unfaithfuls" who are anxious to see the world-renowned carpets whose exquisite designs recall the handiwork of Egyptian antiquity. The carpets produced in Kairwan, Tunis, Sousse and other centers, aggregate about 5,000 square yards every year.—Chicago News.

Known to Fire Worshipers

Baku, the Mecca of the Zoroastrians or Fire Worshipers, was for centuries visited by thousands who came on pilgrimage to the "Eternal Fires," which were nothing but burning natural gas or petroleum; in the Temple at Surakhani, Marco Polo, the Venetian traveler describes the "Burning Springs," and Roman history provides the earliest records of the use of oil for lighting, being burned in the lamps in the Temple of Jupiter.

The Sword of Damocles

"Do you mean to say you began suit for divorce the day after your marriage?"

"Certainly," responded the advanced woman, "but that is merely a precautionary measure; the case won't be pushed as long as my husband conducts himself satisfactorily."

Convenient Umbrella

Umbrellas are carried from the top instead of the grip handle by means of a disappearing strap an English inventor patented. This prevents the ribs from opening up part way when not secured by the catch at the bottom. The umbrella is but 22 inches long when closed, and, when open, the strap is hidden.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Use for Old Army Tents

Army tents as mail sacks are in use by the Post Office department. A million or more of the canvas bags slung across the shoulders of the letter carriers of the country have been cut from material originally intended as tents and wagon covers for the A. E. F. Since the World war the United States army has diverted 3,332,418 yards of surplus duck canvas from military use and turned it over to the post office authorities. The material was valued at $1,152,319, the War department has announced.

Requirement Lacking

Wife—Before we were married you said mother could stay with us whenever she pleased.

Husband—Yes, certainly—but she doesn't please.

If you flatter a man he thinks you are one "who understands him"; and you do.

Drive him out!
Drive him out!

He'll exterminate us all! He stepped in Peterman's!

RIGHT! He will exterminate them all!

Peterman's Roach Food exterminates every roach in your house.

It entices roaches from their hiding places. They carry it on their legs and bodies back to their nests. They wriggle over all the others there, over their young and their eggs.

Every one dies and disintegrates. No odor. Nothing is left but a little dry dust.

Don't try to fight roaches with a spray. No spray can possibly reach the roaches, the young and the eggs far behind the baseboards and under the floors.

Only the right powder can do that.

Peterman's Roach Food is the right powder.

Here is the right insecticide for each insect:

PETERMAN'S ROACH FOOD—exterminates cockroaches.

PETERMAN'S ANT FOOD—exterminates ants.

FLYOSAN—kills flies and mosquitoes.

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY—exterminates bed-bugs.

PETERMAN'S MOTH FOOD—protects against moths.

You must have a specific insecticide for each insect. No single insecticide will exterminate them all. We have had nearly 50 years' experience. We know that is true.

Peterman's has the right insecticide for each insect. On sale wherever drugs are sold.

Albert Rooke Makes His Comeback

Wins six-year fight for health. Now well and strong at 60. Husky as ever, he praises Tanlac

At 1830 West 39th Place, Los Angeles, lives Albert A. Rooke, a respected citizen with 38 years of active railroad experience. He tells of a very interesting experience.

"About seven years ago," says Mr. Rooke, "my stomach and liver went back on me. It was a most distressing experience. Nothing seemed to agree with me; I lost all desire for food. A sound night's sleep was out of the question, so I rose each morning tired and pepless. Then constipation developed and made life a continuous misery. I lost weight and could hardly drag myself around a good deal of the time. After six years of that I was all in. Along came the 'flu' when I had no resistance left. That was about the last straw. Nothing seemed to help me.

"On a friend's advice I tried Tanlac, and that certainly did help. I soon began to get refreshing sleep again, to eat with old-time zest. The distressing stomach and liver troubles disappeared. Briefly, Tanlac put me on my feet, with all my old-time vigor and enjoyment of life. I put on weight and after five bottles was as well as ever in my life. That was a year ago. I'm still in fine shape, as you see. Few men of 60 are as well as I am, thanks to Tanlac."

Tanlac is nature's own tonic and body builder, made from roots, herbs and barks by the famous Tanlac formula. Try a bottle—it may do for you what it did for Mr. Rooke. Your druggist has it. Over 52 million bottles sold.

MENLO PARK

Leave for Europe Next Week

Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy of North Fair Oaks, where the former conducts the North Fair Oaks Grocerteria, leave next week for Europe for a four months' trip. They will visit France and the British Isles and will spend some time in their former home in County Down, Ireland, the place of their youthful dreams.

Seeks to Recover $10,728

W. E. Dale, the Menlo Park grocer, has brought an action for damages in the Superior court through his attorneys, Ross and Ross, against K. Clark and A. B. Clark. The amount sought to be recovered is $10,728. This includes repairs on an automobile, hospital and doctor bills, loss of time, etc. On January 28th last defendants collided with plaintiff on the highway at Belmont, demolishing the latter's automobile. Dale was injured and has not yet recovered, according to the complaint.

Leaveing Soon for Europe

Mr. and Mrs. Dean G. Witter have taken the John G. Sutton place at Menlo Park for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton and their son are leaving next week for a trip to Europe and will be away for many months. Their son, Reuel R. Sutton, will enter Harvard in the fall and after their return to this country, Mrs. Sutton plans to remain in the East until about November.

Mr. Witter is the son of the late Willis G. Witter who in the early nineties made the race for district attorney. He was defeated by the late George Fox and shortly afterwards became assistant U. S. Attorney at San Francisco. Dean Witter was born and raised at San Carlos and was a grand nephew of the late Timothy Guy Phelps. He is a broker and very wealthy. While at college at Berkeley the young man carried off all honors. The elder Witter came from the east in 1889 and settled in San Carlos. He was a struggling attorney and after he became assistant attorney he invested his savings in a dredger that reclaimed thousands of acres of the delta lands at Stockton, the returns from which made him wealthy.

Elmer Dolbeck and wife will leave on June 1st. for Ticonderoga, ew York, their former home, to permanently reside. Mr. Dolbeck for some time past was in charge of the Shell Oil Company's station here.

Denis Mers Transferred

Denis Mers, the local post, has been transferred from the flag station of the Southern Pacific Company on Ravenswood avenue to the crossing on Oak Grove avenue. The services of a flag man on the former crossing will be dispensed with. This is a dangerous place and the public should be safeguarded at this point. It is to be hoped the company will restore the service.

To Picnic Sunday

The second annual picnic of the North Palo Alto Resident Association was held last Sunday in the shady nook of the Home Dairy ranch, a part of the Stanford estate on the Portola road, a short distance from Coon's bridge. The bubbing brook rushing by, the cooling shade of the trees and blooming wild flowers in abundance made the setting for the outing one of admiration and delight. William Romes of East Palo Alto barbecued the meat to the approval of all. The ice cream and cakes provided by the beautiful women of North Palo Alto tickled the palates of the picknickers, who satisfied the cravings of their sharpened appetities from viands spread out in long tables beneath the tall trees on the brink of the placid Los Trancos. It was a delightful occasion, one that will long be remembered by the participants. This annual outing is always looked forward to by the good people of North Palo Alto with considerable pleasure. About seventy-five people were present, a considerable more than last year. Happy speeches full of wit and repartee were made by M. I. Piers, Dr. Tait, Major Hill of the base hospital, D. E. O'Keefe, Attorney Fred Reynolds, Mona Christensen, A. E. Webber, president of the Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Boyer, William Romes and others. As the sun began to sink behind the Sierra Morena mountains and when the shades of evening began to settle upon the valley the tired but happy picknickers left the scene of pelasure for their homes in one of the most progressive portions of the peninsula.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius McClymont yesterday afternoon entertained the Garden Committee of the Woman's Club of San Francisco. The spacious grounds were a scene of gaiety. Large tables ladened with all the good things of the season were spread among the trees on the lawn, while an orchestra in a bower of roses regaled the throng with music. The visitors, many of whom had not been here before, were delighted with the outing to one of the fairest sections of the state.

O'Keefe, Jr., was awarded a classical diploma in latin and was distinguished in Spanish. Cyril Bryner was awarded a classical diploma in Latin. He was awarded the Doctor Toner elocution prize of $15 and the dramatic composition prize of $25, also a medal for application and conduct. Young O'Keefe when he returns next semester to the university will major in law.

"Jiggs' Corner" Opened

"Jiggs' Corner" was opened last Saturday evening with a blaze of glory. Guests crowded the place from all points of the peninsula and were met and greeted by the graceful and magnetic host, Louis Beltramo who knows how to cater to the public. The place is doing a flourishing business. The name "Jiggs" is sure to draw a crowd.

Appointed Receiver for Company

United States District Judge A. F. St. Sure has appointed Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., a receiver for A. C. Wagy Company, the stock and bond house which closed its doors on May 16 as a result of the Julian blow-up. The concern is an off-shoot of the oil concern. Young Shortridge is an able young attorney and will give account of his receivership. Recently he was made receivrer of a big shipping concern in San Francisco.

—ooo—

Judge James W. Bartlett, superior judge of Trinity county, is sitting for Judge Buck in the Superior court. Judge Bartlett is one of the ablest jurists in the state having during his twenty-five years of service on the bench held court in nearly every county in the state. He is a graduate of St. Mary's College, where he established a wonderful record as a brilliant scholar. He was there when the late Judge Dooling was a professor of latin at the college and taught the future judge the language that all lawyers must know, if they desire to be successful. Judge Bartlett would be a shining light on the Superior bench owing to his ability as a jurist and his masterful knowledge of the law. It is to be hoped that some day he will reach the highest court of his native state, a distinction he so richly deserves and which he would honor by his judicial accomplishments.

Bus Line Needed Over Dumbarton

By D. E. O'KEEFE

About two hundred citizens of San Mateo county and Alameda county went to the hearing of the California Transit Comapny and the Peerless Auto Company for permits to run busses over the Dumbarton bridge from the other side of the bay to this section. The hearing was before the State Railroad Commission on Monday. The former concern asks for permission to route its busses that go over the San Joaquin Valley up the peninsula to the city instead of crossing the ferries. The company proposes to carry passengers on this side to points across the bay and vice-versa. The Peerless concern asks for a permit to run a bus line from Pleasanton to Palo Palo over the Willow road and from the College town to Menlo Park.

Everyone present at the hearing were enthusiastic about the bus lines, many taking the witness stand to testfiy as to the advantages to be gained by granting the permits. They all were of one mind telling how that section about the Dumbarton bridge would be developed by the advent of the bus lines.

Strange as it may seem there were opposition to the granting of the permits by certain transportation corporations which will not be in competition with the proposed lines. Why this opposition developed is a puzzle to the large gathering at the hearing on Monday last.

There is little do bt but that the permits will be granted by the railroad commission as the construction of the Dumbarton bridge made its use by bus lines imperative, in fact, an absolute necessity. If we cannot have bus lines over the span then we are in the grasp of a tremendous monopoly which must be broken by the people in order to secure that which is their heritage, their right.

The commission is made up of hard headed lawyers who will not be swayed by sophistries of the other transportation lines.

The lines proposed are an absolute necessity for the convenience and comfort of the traveling public.

The granting of those permits will be a big advantage to the people living in the territory affected and will be a big agency in developing that section.

A decision is expected in a short time when the companies will at once begin operations. The Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce is planning to make the advent of the first bus in Menlo Park a gala event. Speech making, barbecue, dancing, etc., will be arranged for that day. God speed the day when these lines are established connecting Alameda county with San Mateo county.

WOODSIDE

The Parent-Teacher Association has planned a special evening in honor of the fathers of the community. Tonight an entertainment and reception will be given for their benefit. Judge McGrath will be the principal speaker and there will be other interesting features, including refreshments. All are invited.

The school baseball team, having recovered from its attack of the measles, was conclusively defeated on Wednesday by the team from the Ravenswood School by a score of 17 to 6.

There will be no preaching service at the Woodside church on Sunday. Mr. St. John, the minister, has gone to the Yosemite and will remain over the week-end. Sunday school services will be held as usual.

Dr. and Mrs. Alanson Weeks, who have been spending the week ends here during the spring, will open their home for the summer season beginning the first of June.

The epidemic of measles has apparently left this community and the school attendance has returned to normal.

Mrs. Joe Silva is visiting her sister, Mrs. Donnelley at Burlingame.

Mrs. Wm. Roth is having a new stable built upon the property recently purchased by her from Dr. Topham.

Miss Elizabeth Jenkins of San Francisco spent the week end with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jenkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Kelley and Reuben Taylor will go to the Yosemite for the week-end and the following holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Covington Pringle and family plan to spend the summer vacation at Vancouver.

The Searsville Lake resort has proved very popular during the warm days with its varied attractions and swimming and boating facilities.

IT'S A BOY

Not a Lindbergh, but a Sahlberg, and the little stranger completed its flight from babyland early Wednesday morning under the skilful guidance of Dr. J. L. Ross, who directed the stork to deposit its precious burden at the Redwood City hospital, to bless the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Sahlberg. Two grandfathers, two grandmothers and a great-grandmother, Mrs. Sarah T. Fox of this city, welcomed the ten-pound youngster with mingled feelings of pleasure and happiness. Grandpa Fox says the boy is a born duck hunter, because he made his worldly appearance just after day break in time for the first fight of the wild birds down the bay shore, while Grandpa Sahlberg maintains the boy will be an aviator, as one hundred miles per hour has nothing on that grandson. The baby has nothing to say about it as yet, and in the meantime both mother and child are doing nicely.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR BODY OF DROWNED M

Searching parties continued during the week scanning the w of the bay for the body of cisso Luchessi, 28-year-old who was drowned on Sunday 15, while saving the life friend, Giacomo Colomie had fallen in.

Italian societies of South Francisco have offered a re of $100 for the finding dead man's body.

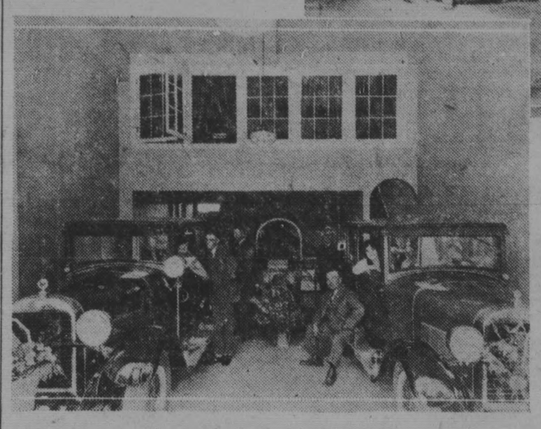
New Auto Agency Sells Eight Cars First Week

E. G. HINDS COMPANY REPORTS RECORD MAKING START FOR NEW AGENCY ON STATE HIGHWAY

E. G. Hinds, manager of E. G. Hinds Co., local agency for the Hudson and Essex cars, reports the sale this week of eight cars. The concern opened its place of business last week on the highway, and Hinds feels very well pleased with the first week's business. Most of the sales, he states, can be traced to his advertising locally.

In the accompanying picture, Miss Farrett Leahy is signing up for one of the new Hudson cars on the Hinds easy payment plan. With her in the Hudson is Miss Anne Bullivant. The young ladies who are trying out the new Essex are Miss Grace Bullivant and Miss Margie McKay.

The Hinds payment plan makes it possible for one to pay small weekly amounts instead of making a large firstpayment. When the first payment has been made by the small weekly payments, the purchaser takes possession of the car.



The upper view shows the complete workshop of the E. G. Hinds Co. The mechanics have been working overtime since the opening of the shop last Saturday. Hinds announced this week that an invitation to the public which he extended last week was not for the opening day only, but that his organization welcomes visitors at all times, and will be glad to show visitors through the shop and beautiful show room.

S. F. REALTORS TAKE PENINSULA OUTING

More than 500 employes and friends of Leonard & Holt held their annual outing, golf tournament and barbecue at Emerald Lake over the last week end.

Mayor Henry Beeger of Redwood City, Chief of Police Daniel J. O'Brien of San Francisco and many notables were present.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED AT PARTY GIVEN HERE

The engagement of Miss Louise Marks, well known in Menlo Park and Redwood City to Lambert Borghini of Los Altos, was announced at a birthday dinner given in honor of the pretty bride-to-be at the home of her friend, Miss Dorothy Rice, on Stambaugh Street, Redwood City, last Sunday evening. The happy event is scheduled for July 9th. After a brief honeymoon to be spent in the south, the young couple will occupy their pretty new home in Stanford Park, Menlo Park.

The guests of the evening were: Valda Stehenne, Joseph Britschgi, Louise Marks, Lambert Borghini, Dorothy Rice, Clifford Marks, Mrs. Hughes, George Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Rice and Mr. and Mrs. Emberton.

The prospective bride is an unusually charming and pretty girl, popular on the peninsula and is a graduate of Sequoia Union High School.

COUNTY ROADS TO BE BUILT BY STATE FUNDS

The completion of the Bay Shore highway and the Skyline boulevard were practically assured yesterday by the signing of the two Breed bills, Senate bills, No. 3 and No. 518 by Governor Young. The two bills provide for a gasoline tax and highway fund allocation measures which assure completion of the state highway program over a period of twelve years.

Senator Arthur H. Breed, author of the highway bills; Ralph Bull, chairman of the California Highway Commission; Burton A. Towne, president; H. J. Brunnier, first vice-president; and D. E. Watkins, secretary and general manager of the California State Automobile Association; and Horace G. Miller, president, Edward D. Lyman, first vice-president, and Standish L. Mitchell, secretary of the Automobile Club of Southern California were present by official invitation when Governor Young affixed his signature to the two measures.

The two measures provide adequate funds for completion of the state highway system over a twelve year period and equitably allocate the revenue to be derived from an additional one cent gasoline tax to primary and secondary highways in all parts of California.

Senate Bill No. 3 provides for an additional one-cent per gallon gasoline tax which is to be used exclusively for the construction of new state highways. It is estimated that this additional tax will provide on an average over a twelve-year period the sum of $10,000,000 per year, or a total of $120,000,000 for highway construction.

The existing two-cent gasoline tax returns approximately $18,000,000 per year. This income is supplemented by registration and weight fees which amount to aproximately $7,000,000 net each year. One-half of this revenue, or $12,500,000 per year, goes to the various counties in proportion to the number of registered motor vehicles in each county. The other half is retained by the state for the maintenance, wideing and reconstruction of state highways.

The additional one-cent tax is expected to provide approximately $9,000,000 during the first year it is in effect. The amount will increase so that the annual revenue for new highways will average $10,000,000 over a eriod of twelve years. At the present time California is also receiving approximately $9,500,000 ofFederal aid which will also be available for state highway construction.

Competent engineers estimate that the existing tax will provide adequate funds for the maintenance and reconstruction of state highways and that the increased tax will finance a proper program of new construction sufficient to care for the needs of California's increasing population and motor vehicle registration.

Senate Bill No. 518, which is a comapnion measure to No. 3, allocates and directs the expenditure of the money to be raised under the additional one-cent gasoline tax, as well as the state's share of the revenues from the existing gasoline tax and weight and registration fees.

For the purpose of allocating highway revenues the state highway system is divided into primary and secondary highways. This is done without adding to or subtracting from the present highway system a single mile of road.

The primary system, as designated by this measure, includes the original trunk lines and county seat laterals described in the original bond act of 1909. It also includes the interstate connections and the two recreational roads entering Yosemite and Sequoia national parks. These two roads have become important parts of the state highway system. The Bayshore Highway from San Francisco along the marsh to the Dumbarton bridge is also included in the system. The first unit of this road is already nearing completion and the second unit from South San Francisco to San Mateo is to be started very shortly. This road will, according to present plans, pass thrpugh Redwood City near or on Bradford street.

All other state highways are classified as secondary, and the bill allocates 75 per cent of the additional one-cent gasoline tax to the primary highways and 25 per cent to the secondary highways.

In this system is included the Skyline road which is now in use from San Francisco as far as the La Honda road. The present plans call for the completion of this road to Woodwardia in the Santa Cruz mountains, and the paving of the whole distance.

Under this division, 4,287.1 miles are made secondary highways. That the division of money between the two systems is an equitable one is apparent when it is taken into consideration that the primary roads are those requiring the highest development and those which carry the bulk of the state-wide traffic.

In order to insure an even development of the highways throughout the state, the bill designates two groups of counties into which highway revenues are allocated. The first group includes the forty-five northern and central counties, comprising 52 percent of the land area of the state and having approximately 42 per cent of the motor vehicle registration. In the second group are the thirteen southern counties, which compromise 48 percent of the land area and have approximately 58 per cent of the registered motor vehicles.

Since the bill requires that the primary highway fund be allocated between the two groups of counties in proportion to the primary mileage in each group, Northern and Central California, with its greater land area and 2,345.7 miles of primary highways, will receive 54.7 per cent of this fund. Southern California, with 1,941.4 miles of primary highway, will receive 45.3 per cent of the primary highway construction money.

Money for secondary state highways is to be devided equally between the two groups of counties. This, too, is an equitable distribution when all the factors involved are taken into consideration.

While Senate Bill No. 518 does not distrub the present equal division between the state and the counties of the existing income from the two-cent gasoline tax and registration and weight fees, it does allocate the state's portion of these funds which are required by law to be used for maintenance, widening and reconstruction.

The new law requires the California Highway Commission to exend the amount necessary for main tenance of highways throughout the state, without regard to county

KIWANIS DELEGATES ARE LEAVING FOR MEMPHIS

John E. Layng and Harry Groom will leave on Tuesday for Memphis, Tenn., where they will represent the Redwood City Kiwanis Club as delegates to the international convention being held in Memphis from June 6 to 9.

About 5000 deegates are expected to attend the 11th international convention in the southern city.

"Latest registration figures, as received from the 1,635 clubs in the United States and Canada, show that by June 1 we can be assured of 5,000," Merton S. Heiss, the convention manager, states.

By rail, road and air, Kiwanians will arive in Memphis. Howard Smith of Dayton, Ohio, governor of the Kiwanis District of Ohio, and George Maury and S. L. Watkins, both of Lockport, New York, will travel by airplane.

Delbert Dotson, of Sidney, Montana, has built a cruiser and will sail two thousand miles along the Yellowstone, Missouri and Mississippi rivers to reach the convention city.

Bobby Jones, golf champion, will play an exhibition game for Kiwanians on June 9, as one of the features that will attract attention of the visitors. Ray Griffin, member of the local club, states that this should prove one of the most interesting features of the convention.

A religious musicale, a reception to the International president, Ralph A. Amerman, of Scraton, Pennsylvania, All Kiwanis Night and "A Night in Dixie," which will display a tableau of the Old South, will be other social engagements for the convention.

About thirty-five local people, consisting of Sciots and their wives and families, attended a theatre party at the Alcazar theatre in San Francisco followed by a dinner at the States on Tuesday evening.

J. Warnock Walsh, well-known realtor of San Francisco and a former resident of this city, was a business visitor in Redwood City on Monday.

Frozen Desserts for the summer luncheons

Made with an electric refrigerator and as delicious as those of the famous hotels

THINK of a small independent ice plant right in your own home. One that freezes convenient ice cubes and delicious desserts. And during the hot summer days keeps your food cool, fresh and appetizing.

The electric refrigerator gives you this carefree refrigeration.

It freezes ices and salads that are so good and so easy to make. These desserts are different. They give luncheons a new appetizing richness.

One of our representatives or a dealer will tell you, gladly, more about freezing desserts and keeping food cool, fresh and healthful by means of electricity.

1928 Licensed Plates To Weigh 750 Ton

Blue and gold will be the California color scheme for 1928 automobile license plates, it was announced this week.

This combination was picked at a conference between members of the board of control and officials of the division of motor vehicles. The background will be blue; letters and numerals will be gold.

These colors will be used for all motor vehicles except trucks and other commerical cars equipped with solid tires. For these, plates will have a white background with red letters and numerals.

Blue and gold were chosen because of the high visibility of the combination and the ease with which state officers may read numbers set in these colors.

The initial order will pro amount to 1,750,000 pair heavy increase is expected b motor vehicle authorities.

A great train of 50 cars half a mile in length will b quired to haul these plates. will weigh 750 tons.

The plates will be of 26- steel, fiv einches wide and teen inches long.

Although the annual season will not begin until uary 1st, bids will be re on June 3rd as all details mus handled early because of the mendous volume. The bids be examined by the board of trol, division of motor ve and state purchasing agent.

TELEPHONE GIRL" AT SEQUOIA

...dge Bellamy, Holbrook Blinn, Warner Baxter, Larry Graye Featured

When the destinies of three men, two women, great political parties and a whole state hang on the shoulders of one beautiful young girl, there's sure to be plenty of strong drama. And those who see "The Telehone Girl" at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, June 1-2 will get just that—strong drama.

Herbert Brenon's new Paramount production, based on the William C. De Mille play "The Woman" relates the saga of Kitty O'Brien, telephone girl in the hotel where Matthew Standish, candidato for Governor, is being feted on election eve. Kitty has her own troubles without becoming involved in politics. Tom Blake, son of "Boss" Jim Blake, is unable to marry her because of his father's opposition.

All things would seem to indicate a Standish landslide at the polls and Governor Mark Robinson sees his chances of re-election vanishing in thin air. Suddenly, detectives who have been investigating Standish's past life tell the "Boss," Robinson's father-in-law, of a certain unsavory episode which, with some added information will ruin the Standish reform platform. Van Dyke, owner of a powerful paper, promises the use of his presses if the story be completed in time.

What information is missing? How can it possibly affect election results? Why should Kitty become mixed up in these affairs?

...dge Bellamy, heroine of 'Ber... the Sewing Machine Girl," plays the title role. Holbrook ..., distinguished stage thepian, is "Boss" Jim Blake. Warner ..., featured player in "The ... Gatsby," portrays Standish. ...

Rheba Crawford Evangelist To Speak Here On Sunday Evening

Residents of Redwood City will have an opportunity on Sunday evening of listening to an address by Rheba Crawford, one of the best known women preachers in the country, who will be the speaker in the evening at the Methodist church at the corner of Broadway and Brewster.

Arrangements for Miss Crawford's first apearance in Redwood City were being completed this week by C. B. Wager, Chautauqua director, who has been connected with Dr. James L. Gordon's meetings in San Francisco.

Miss Crawford has had an interesting history and is a speaker of unusual interest. She began life's work as an actress on the boards of New York houses. Later, becoming interested in the work of the Salavtion Army, Miss Crawford deserted the stage and devoted her life to preaching. She has recently been conducting meetings in Dr. Gordon's church in San Francisco, as she will again next month. Miss Crawford is also a well-known contributor to the San Francisco Bulletin.

...May Allison, making her return to Famous Players after a number of years, is "the woman." Lawrence Gray, the snappy hat salesman of "Love 'em and Leave 'em," has an interesting role as Blake's son.

HI-Y CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of the Sequoia Hi-Y Club Monday evening at the Episcopal Parish House, the election of the new officers for next semester was held.

Arthur Lampkin was elected president; Arville Whitehead, vice president; Fred Kallenborn, secretary; Clarence Stilleson, treasurer.

New members were initiated.

There will be no meeting next Monday evening, on account of it being a holiday. June 6th will be the final meeting for the summer and a special effort is being made to have every member out at this time as it will be a sort of farewell to the members who are to graduate this year.

NIGHT FIRE DAMAGES BUILDING

A fire in the old Wahl building at the intersection of Broadway and Main street early Monday morning called out the fire department for a two-hour battle with the flames. The fire apparently started in a restaurant which occupied a portion of the lower floor of the building. It was discovered by a guest at the hotel, who seeing smoke issuing from the building, sent in an alarm.

Before the flames could be extinguished a part of the interior wall of the building had been destroyed and the flames had burned through the ceiling and the floor of the upper story.

This is the third fire to start in this building within the past three years, but was less damaging than the two previous ones. The restaurant was badly damaged by water as well as the fire, and the front windows were broken. The other parts of the building was not greatly injured.

TOWN AND BANK SETTLE ON CITY'S SHORTAGE

A settlement of the shortage which has existed in the account of Redwood City since the suicide of Frank K. Towne, city treasurer and cashier of the First National Bank, was effected last Friday when officials of the bank and of the town met in executive session.

Attorneys for both the bank and the city decided that because of Towne's dual capacity as treasurer and cashier that the responsibility for the shortage of $80,000 in the city funds was not entirely on the part of either the city or the bank. For this reason a compromise was effected by which both institutions will stand a part of the shortage.

The settlement as effected gives the city a substantial bank balance and with this the work which has been held up on account of the shortage of funds will be recommenced. City Attorney Mansfield is already preparing for the extension of Broadway, and other city matters will be given immediate consideration.

KIT CARSONS RECEIVE EFFICIENCY TROPHY

The Kit Carson Pioneer Club of the Y. M. C. A. which meets at Intermediate School put on a half hour of entertainment before the Intermediate School assembly last Friday. The program and aims of the Pioneers were also given. Roy A. Hohberger, the local Y. M. C. A. Secretary, presented the Pioneer Club efficiency trophy to the "Kit Carsons." This club in competition with the other Pioneer Clubs of the county won this handsome trophy in addition to winning the championships both in football and basketball.

Norman Wagner was presented with a silver Pioneer Button for the work he has accomplished during the past year.

CONVENTION ATTENDED BY LOCAL BANKER

The increased interest displayed by the "big city" bankers in the welfare of the agricultural producer was the outstanding feature of the thirty-third annual convention of the California Bankers Association held last week at Del monte, according to E. T. Harrison, diretcor and cashier of the First National Bank of this city, who was in attendance at the convention.

Both the retiring president of the association, W. E. Wilcox, vice-resident of the Anglo and London Paris National Bank of San Francisco and the new president, Ralph B. Hardacre, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles in their addresses placed first emphasis on the agricultural problems and needs of the state.

The convention featured by the maiden speech of Will C. Wood, as the new state superintendent of banks and by an address by Chester H. Rowell on the Chinese situation and its relation to California. Wood stated that his examiners were instructed to act more than as mere auditors and investigators in their trips about the state. They are told to discover new and improved methods of doing business and to carry these ideas from town to town, he said.

In its closing session last Saturday the convention passed a resolution calling on the attorney general to restrain all corporations whether foreign or domestic from engaging in the trust business unless perdmitted to do so by the laws of California. This was directed at the large insurance companies who are writing trust provisions into their policies without having on deposit with the state the reserve required of banks engaged in a trust business unless permitted to do so by

FATHERS TO HAVE NIGHT

Judge John J. McGrath of San Mateo will be the speaker at the Fathers' Night program, being arranged for tonight, at the Woodside grammar school. Everyone in the community is urged to attend, this evening being especially planned for the men. There will also be a program of songs and readings followed by coffee and doughnuts.

The Woodside Parent-Teachers' Association was greatly pelased with the success of its whist party last Friday night as it brought out a greater majority of Woodside people than at any previous time, that being one of the association's aims. The refreshments were under the able management of Mrs. Dudley and her committee. Prizes were carried home by Mrs. Dollie Granger, Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Tessie Jones, Mr. Toddy, Mrs. J. Kotter, Mrs. G. Givens, and Mrs. Shapiro.

At the next regular business meeting on June 2, installation of officers for the coming year will take place.

Mrs. Grace Cooper, county treasurer, was in attendance at the state convention of county treasurers held in Sacramento last Friday.

Mrs. Harvey Edwards, deputy superintendent of schools, returned this week from a week's vacation spent with relatives in Carson City, Nevada.

Sheriff J. J. Keating, the popular official of Marin county, was here on Tuesday to bring back to Marin county Fred Elsinore, wanted in San Rafael for the embedzlement of an automobile. The crime was committed last November. Recently Elsinore ran into Alexander Hamilton's car at Menlo Park and was arrested. By this means the Marin county sheriff located his man who was employed as a gardener at Menlo Park. Sheriff Keating has been Sheriff of Marin county for the past seventeen years, filling the office with credit to himself and to his constituents with whom he is extremely popular.

Mayor Henry Beeger now listens with an understanding sympathy to heartless jokes about the Prince of Wales and his horsemanship. While on a fishing trip at the base of Mount Hamilton Sunday, the mayor was seen by his companions to perform that particular type of dismounting in which H. R. H. has become a specialist. Beeger was badly shaken up but was otherwise uninjured.

J. A. Gibson, Mrs. Gibson and daughters, Miss Josephine and Miss Gertrude, will spend the next few days visiting with friends at Capitola.

John W. Poole and Mrs. Poole, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robertson leave tomorrow for Yosemite valley, where they will stay for a few days.

Miss Sallie Nelson entertained a neighborhood card club at her home on Webster street Saturday evening. Five hundred was enjoyed by those present.

Eight delegates from Robinhood Circle No. 517 left yesterday to attend the convention of Neighbors of Woodcraft being held in Asilomar. Those representing the local circle are Mesdames Gertrude Jones, Augusta Sharkey, Daisy Barteaux, Florence Sahlberg, Bertha Jordan, Laura Walker, Byrl Stone and Selma Locker.

Andrew Stewart of this city left yesterday for Long Beach, where he will represent the peninsula unit of the Furniture Dealers' Association at the convention of that organization which convenes in Long Beach today and tomorrow.

An American flag was presented to the local troop of Girl Scouts at the Congregational church Tuesday by members of Gen. Geo. H. Evans Post of the Woman's Relief Corps of this city. The commander of the post, Mrs. C. L. Collins was in charge of the meeting and the presentation was made by Patriotic Instructor Mary Moore.

Word has been received from D. W. Williams, who with his wife and son, is touring Europe. The local people are now in Belgium and will leave shortly for England, where they have secured an automobile and will spend a number of weeks visiting places of interest in the British Isle before returning by way of New York.

Redwood Circle of Druids will hold a card party on Monday evening, June 13 in the I. O. O. F. hall. Mrs. Elizabeth Pelegrini is chairman of the committee which is in charge of the arrangements.

P. E. BRAND'S CAR BURNS ON HIGHWAY

A car belonging to P. E. Brand and in which he was returning from the Sciot's theatre party in San Francisco with his wife and daughter, was burned on the highway early Wednesday morning. The Brands were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potts, and had just left them at their home on the highway when the car burst into flames.

The fire was extinguished by the fire department. Investigation showed that in some manner the carburator had not closed properly and that the car had become flooded with gasoline which caught fire when the engine backfired.
